PICKETS MASS AT JOHNSON ST. BRIDGE

CUPE Strike Takes Violent Note

The strike by Victoria's outside workers came close to violence today when tension and scuffles followed mass picket demonstrations at the Johnson Street Bridge and Oak Bay junior and senior high schools.

About 100 picket members of various CUPE locals representing outside workers, thronged bridge approaches for more than two hours, empeding road and marine traffic.

The demonstration "to get things rolling again in negotiations," as one picket explained — generally was free of violence, although there were one or two minor scuffles.

One picket who tried riding the front of a vehicle crossing the bridge was thrown off. The several police officers on the scene stood by observing and occasionally chatting to the union members. No charges were laid.

The bridge picketing started at about 9:30 a.m., when the bridge was supposed to have been raised for marine traffic for one hour.

A police spokesman said most road drivers on finding the bridge blocked by pickets made their way to the Point Ellice (Bay Street) bridge, but some insisted on trying to cross as usual.

A Butler-Lafarge cement barge had to turn back when the crew found the bridge would not be lifted, but a Ministry of Transport spokesman said no MOT traffic was affected.

Among the motorists who waited more than 15 minutes to cross the bridge was David Whiteway, a Victoria West resident.

He said he had been told by "one of the 100 nuts standing on the bridge," that he would be allowed through at 10:30 a.m. — the usual time when it would have been lowered once again for road traffic.

"There's not enough sense among the lot of them to fill a kindergarten," he muttered, moments before he slammed his car into reverse because a picket had leaned against the front of the vehicle.

The union man, a stocky, bearded individual, was told by the angry Whiteway to "put your ass" somewhere else.

When the group parted to allow Whiteway through at 10:30 he accelerated across the bridge, followed by pickets running and shouting.

CUPE Local 50 president Jim Walker told the Times the beefed-up pickets and spot picketing could be repeated later in the day and Friday.

He said it is directed at union members who continue to use the bridge, among them CPR truck drivers and B.C. Hydro bus drivers.

TAKEN FOR A RIDE of a few seconds' duration today was this CUPE picket who tried mounting the front of a station wagon at Johnson Street Bridge. The vehicle was driven by David Whiteway, of Robert Street, who waited more than 15 minutes to cross the mass picket line of about 100 CUPE members. The action obstructed road and marine traffic but was mostly peaceful.

'The Kids Come First'

Greater Victoria school teachers reaffirmed Wednesday their intention to continue teaching despite the CUPE strike.

At a mass meeting, closed to the public, at the Playland Club on Glanford, more than 675 teachers gave unanimous support to a resolution passed Jan. 22 allowing teachers to cross picket lines but not do the work of striking janitorial employees.

The teachers said their contractual obligations to the school board would have to have precedence.

However, the teachers indicated they would maintain a hard union line in all other respects and passed a motion that they would "in no way participate in organizing or helping volunteer cleanup crews within the schools."

The motion had originally read they would not participate in "organizing, helping or condoning," but because no one could provide a legal definition of the word "condone" it was dropped.

Another motion, which was referred back to the executive committee for further study would have had a more pressing effect. It proposed Greater Victoria Teachers Association members should not work beside volunteer strikebreakers.

The intention was teachers should leave their classrooms and refuse to teach if volunteer cleaners were present in the school at the same time as both students and teachers.

There was wide-ranging debate over the implications of such action. Some teachers felt it would constitute a breach of their contract. Others considered it nearly impossible to enforce.

"Does that mean we would have to have lookouts to the right and lookouts to the left guarding every door in the school and sounding a warning at the approach of the volunteers?" one teacher queried.

Security was extremely tight prior to the meeting as GVTA officials stood at the front door and checked credentials of teachers streaming through.

A third floor meeting hall in the sports complex was jammed to capacity resulting in an overflow of about 175 teachers being rerouted to a second floor room adjacent to the club lounge overlooking the curling rink.

Those in the room below heard the proceedings over a public address system hastily switched on. Whenever a vote was taken a courier would race upstairs and give the results to the main body.

The votes in each section varied dramatically on the motion that members should not work beside volunteer strikebreakers. The main body voted overwhelmingly to return the motion to the executive committee for more study; those in the room below voted just as over-

Fijian To Get Permit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hari Charan Singh, 27, who was ordered deported last week because he suffered a nervous breakdown in 1974, will get a special permit to remain in Canada but will have to apply for it outside the country.

Singh said Immigration Minister Robert Andras will give him a special permit but he will have to leave Canada and apply for the permit from the United States because the minister can not overrule the immigration board's decision.

A former resident of Fiji, Singh had been working legally in Canada for more than four years when he suffered a two-month breakdown. Under the Immigration Act persons who have suffered mental illness within the preceding seven years are not allowed to enter Canada. The immigration appeal board last week revoked a 1973 order directing that Singh be given landed immigrant status.

Art Lee (L-Vancouver East) said Andras could not overrule the board's decision but could grant the special permit. He said the minister was shocked by the board's decision.

An immigration department spokesman in Ottawa confirmed the permit will be granted and that officials were surprised at the deportation order.

Singh, who is a carpenter, is married and has two children. His family is also living legally in Canada.

63.7% Sought In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for seven Greater Vancouver municipalities said Wednesday that unions representing 5,000 civic workers are asking for a increase that could amount to 63.7 per cent over one year.

The negotiators said the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union, (VMRE) were seeking an increase of 22 per cent or $200 a month, whichever was greater for all inside employees.

"All outside employees are to receive an increase of $2 an hour with tradesmen to receive an additional but as yet unspecified upward adjustment," a spokesman for the municipal negotiators said.

In addition, they said a cost-of-living adjustment was to be paid on the first days of April, July and October and would call for a 1.5-per-cent pay increase for each one-per-cent increase in the consumer price index for Canada.

The unions had declined to make their demands public. Renewed contracts talks on behalf of the workers in Vancouver, Burnaby, New Westminster, North Vancouver city and district, Delta and Richmond broke off Tuesday, less than two days after they had begun.

VMRE spokesman Bob Ross said the employers' statement was distorted because they chose the highest possible figures.

He said the union demands were negotiable and the employers "are deliberately trying to distort the unions' very clear intent to bargain a reasonable contract as quickly as possible."

He said the cost-of-living clause has not been negotiated but the employers included it in their forecast of what the settlement proposed by the union would cost.

The employers said that based on the unions' prediction of the consumer price index increase this year, the clause could produce a 13.5 per cent salary increase.

Laborers represented by CUPE now earn $4.52 an hour.

Mayor Studies Charging Levi

DUNCAN — Mayor Ken Paskin is looking into the possibility of charging provincial Human Resources Minister Norm Levi with contributing to the delinquency of a juvenile.

Paskin said today he knows "some people will hear of this and just think I'm some kind of nut, but I'm serious about it. It's my way of bringing this whole darn mess before the public."

Paskin made the decision to consider the charge after juveniles broke through an RCMP roadblock and led police on a 110-mile chase Saturday and Sunday.

Paskin said today one of the juveniles is a 14-year-old boy who has escaped from the human resources juvenile centre in Nanaimo 13 times.

"Numerous times when this boy was brought to juvenile court, the probation office made an application to raise him to adult court. Each time that application has been blocked by the human resources department which has taken on a commitment to look after him," Paskin said.

"And each time that commitment has failed."

Levi, as head of the department, has taken on the commitment to look after the boy and "then allows him to walk out of the youth centre any time he wants," Paskin said. "I say the department and Mr. Levi are contributing to juvenile delinquency."

The mayor said the boy is now in the juvenile detention centre in Victoria, but expects him to be brought back up to Duncan to appear in family court there.

He said that even if the application to be made by the probation office to raise the youth to adult court is allowed to go through this time, he will still try to lay the charge against Levi.

"It's not only this incident," he said.

"I am determined that someone is going to do something about this sort of thing. All the philosophy and idealism in the world hasn't worked and it's time someone did something practical."

Levi, asked today about the mayor's intention to lay a charge against him, had no comment.

Armed civilians set up roadblocks on the highways and searched cars. Many were armed with a list of licence numbers prepared by a Communist group.

WCB Halts Work At Cave-In Site

The Workers' Compensation Board has ordered work stopped on a construction site on Fort near Cook where a 34-year-old carpenter died in a cave-in Wednesday afternoon.

Compensation Board official Bill Harrison said today work on the excavation of the seven-storey $2.6 million office building will not be allowed to continue until all exposed earthen walls have been braced according to regulations.

Meanwhile workmen and employees of the developing company, Dunburn Developments, are still reeling under the tragedy which took the life of Dennis Gardner of 658 Hoy Lake.

Dunburn president, Robert Early, said it was the first serious accident in the company's four-year history.

Gardner was buried when a wall gave way as he and another carpenter began to shore a 12-foot deep hole which was to be a footing for the new building.

The other man, Chris Van de Water, 26, managed to duck behind a ladder and crawled to safety.

It took rescue workers more than three hours digging through heavy blue-grey clay before they finally reached Gardner and pulled him free.

Early described Gardner as an "exceptionally fine worker, conscientious, quiet . . . a first-rate fellow," and said he had been an employee of an associate Dunburn company, R & B Construction for the past three-and-a-half years.

Gardner is survived by his wife Karen and three small children, David, 7, Sherri, 6, and James, 2. Mrs. Gardner is eligible for a lifetime pension from the WCB.

Early said his company would assist the family "in whatever way we can."

An inquest is expected to be held sometime within the next day or two, Coroner Edmond St. Jorre said.

Dredging Inquiry Demanded in Parliament

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition parties demanded in the Commons Wednesday a full public inquiry into all federal dredging operations after charges were laid against a number of firms and top business executives across the country.

One of the executives charged with conspiring to defraud the government was a former federal Liberal campaign chairman in B.C.

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp repeatedly rejected the demand for a public inquiry on the grounds that it would interfere with the trials of the 14 executives and 13 dredging companies.

But he declared that the fact that the former Liberal campaign chairman — Hugh Martin of Vancouver — has been charged shows his government is acting impartially in the politically-embarrassing case.

Twelve companies were listed in the indictment as being charged with one or more counts of conspiracy, but lawyers referred consistently to 13 and 13 were mentioned in the counts. Left off the list was Construction Aggregates, the only U.S.-based company. The prosecutors confirmed Wednesday night that Construction Aggregates is being charged.

Meanwhile, Solicitor General Warren Allmand, still under attack by the opposition for an alleged attempt to slow down the investigation which began in Hamilton Harbor in 1972, indicated that RCMP investigations into federal contracts are not completed and that more charges may be laid.

Up until Wednesday the dredging scandal had caused the conviction of three men connected with Hamilton Harbor operations, the resignation of Ontario Solicitor General George Kerr and the attempted resignation of federal Labor Minister John Munro — a Hamilton MP — who was released on Wednesday from hospital where he was being treated for exhaustion.

Munro, Allmand and Transport Minister Jean Marchand have been under heavy fire in the Commons for the past month over alleged political implications of the dredging contract scandal.

It is not clear just how the initial information came to authorities — Hamilton City Council raised the first public suspicions in September, 1972 — but prosecutors left the impression that unnamed persons provided basic information and will testify.

Businessman Ken Barfknecht of Bolton, Ont., said Wednesday he has been told assassination contracts have been let on the lives of he and his wife because of what he knows and now fears for his life.

Barfknecht said in an interview he went to RCMP in the summer of 1972 as a result of problems in operating his ship salvage business on Hamilton harbor and gave them information.

the school today as CUPE picketed the entrances.

Picket lines of about 30 people each were put up around the Cranmore Road entrance to the senior school and the junior school's Cadboro Bay Road entrance.

Oak Bay police were called to the scene stood by without intervening.

By about 8:45 a.m. students and teachers were in the school attending classes.

Teachers parked their cars on side streets around the school and a large group of teachers went through the picket line without incident at about 8:30 a.m.

One retired teacher complained of abuse taken by his wife, a senior commercial teacher who crossed the picket line this morning.

He said she was "verbally hassled," called "a scab, pig and strikebreaker. God knows why they'd do that to a five-foot woman, 115 pounds wringing wet."

The nine janitors who clean and maintain Camosun College's Lansdowne campus buildings went back to work at midnight Wednesday and all services at the college were back to normal today.

The janitors have been off work for two weeks, since Greater Victoria School District custodial staff, members of CUPE Local 382 began their strike.

The nine workers are also members of Local 382 and are employed by the school board, but the board, through an agreement with Camosun College, sells their services to clean the college's Lansdowne buildings.

The janitors set up picket lines at the entrances to the Lansdowne campus and secretarial staff at the college, members of CUPE Local 947, did not cross the lines.

The college took the case to the Labor Relations Board and LRB vice-chairman Jack Moore ruled that the janitors could not legally picket the college entrances because the college was not a "place of business" of the struck school board.

Bob Cunningham, vice-president of Local 382, said the nine janitors agreed to return to work and the pickets from the college entrances were withdrawn at midnight Wednesday, allowing secretarial staff to report for work this morning.

Civic employers representing Greater Victoria municipalities, Sidney, the school district and Capital Regional District, Wednesday appointed former Victoria Labor Council secretary George Wilkinson as stand-in negotiator.

"He's not going to add anything to these negotiations," commented Walker, who is chairman of CUPE's area bargaining committee.

"I think they've had to go a long way to find a suitable replacement for Mr. Pearlman and I don't think it's going to make any difference in negotiations."

TANKCAR SEARCH ENDS FRIDAY

The current phase of a search for 340 tons of deadly liquid chlorine lying in four railway cars at the bottom of Malaspina Strait in the Gulf of Georgia ends Friday.

It has not been decided what action will be taken next.

Des Allard, ministry of transport spokesman in Vancouver said no strategy had been mapped at a special meeting of scientists and other officials, held in West Vancouver Wednesday.

The chlorine has been on the sea bed since a barge carrying the railway cars overturned Feb. 19.

Still searching the area near Texada Island where the cars are suspected to be today were the hydrographic vessels Vector, Pandora II and Richardson, as well as

IRAN BEATS DIVORCE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor Joseph Alioto announced that his wife Angelina, who filed for divorce last month, will join him on a business trip to Iran.

"You can draw whatever conclusions you like," the mayor said Wednesday. "When Mrs. Alioto heard about the trip, she said: 'Count me in.'

Teachers to Cross Lines

whelmingly to have the matter resolved then and there.

The meeting got off to a hesitant start when it was ruled an executive committee meeting held the previous night was "unconstitutionally called," and therefore the recommendations drawn up by the executive for the teachers to vote on were "unconstitutional" too.

Association president and chairperson Mavis DeGirolamo saved the day by declaring the meeting simply an "informational" session. The recommendations could be discussed and voted on, she said, but the results would have to be referred to the next general meeting for ratification.

"I am sorry to hear the decision of Mrs. DeGirolamo and the Greater Victoria Teacher's Association." Any decision they make is a cop-out," janitors' Local 382 vice-president Bob Cunningham said today.

Cunningham said teachers have "blown any relations they had with this local" because of their decision to continue going through picket lines. He said "I don't think the inside (non-teaching and teacher aides) staff is too happy with her (DeGirolamo) either."

Teachers who are really concerned about giving children a full day's instruction would be more vocal about it, he said.

"What they are concerned about is their image and their salaries," Cunningham said.

Only three of the seven recommendations presented were so passed, one in slightly amended form.

Two proposals were struck from the list. One would have requested teachers to assess the learning conditions as "adequate" in order to continue reporting to schools. The other was a suggestion space be taken out in Victoria's daily newspapers opposing any stop-gap measures which would prolong the strike and impede students' education.

Similarly a motion that teachers report for duty elsewhere when schools are considered either unsanitary or below a temperature of 65 degrees was quashed by members who felt the proposal was "redundant."

"I object to parents coming into the school and taking the jobs of striking CUPE members," one teacher said. "It's not their place!"

Also the majority of teachers felt it would be unfair for one school to have extended hours of instruction while others were forced to keep to the one-hour or three-hour daily routine.

Staff from Gordon Head Elementary School had, unanimously moved to request the longer hours at their schoool, but that proposal as well as another urging the GVTA petition Premier Dave Barrett for an early settlement were referred back to the executive committee for more study.

DeGirolamo advised a general meeting would be held next Wednesday at the White Eagle Hall on Dock Street in James Bay beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Dredge Inquiry Urged

Barfknecht recalled going to Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) about the matter.

"Linc said it was a biggie and if it went one way it could destroy the Liberal party, but if it went the other, he wouldn't want to be on my coat-tails."

Among four B.C. executives charged Wednesday with conspiracy to defraud was Martin, president of Marwell Dredging Ltd. and chairman of Canadian Dredge and Dock Ltd. of Vancouver. He was federal Liberal campaign chairman in that province for the 1965 election, according to Liberal officials, although they added that he has held no senior position in the party since then.

Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, reported later that Martin was national co-chairman of the Liberal election campaigns of 1962 and 1963.

In the Commons, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent referred to Martin as a senior official in the Liberal party and said that in the best interests of the country the government should end "partisan bickering" over the scandal and set up a public inquiry.

He said the inquiry should be headed by a justice of the Supreme Court of Canada.

"Perhaps the best evidence of the impartiality of the proceedings that are now being followed is that this gentle man is being prosecuted," Sharp retorted.

A warrant was issued Wednesday for Jean Simard, 53, who is related to Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa's wife and to Quebec Tourism Minister Claude Simard.

Jean Simard, vice-president of Marine Industries Ltd., a business built by the wealthy Simard family and now controlled by the uebec government, was named in five of the six counts.

Marine Industries was named in two and J. P. Porter Co. Ltd. was named in four. Mrs. Bourassa and the Simard family are reported to have substantial interests in both companies.

Industry Minister Alistair Gillespie hinted in the Commons the government may withhold a $1.2-million shipbuilding subsidy to Marine Industries until court action is completed.

The next major date is April 30, when steps will begin to hold a preliminary inquiry to determine whether there is enough evidence against the accused to warrant a trial. No pleas, if any, will be entered until after the inquiry.

Dillingham Head Denies Involvement

VANCOUVER (CP) — R. J. Meyers of North Vancouver, president and chief executive officer of Dillingham Corp. of Canada Ltd., said Wednesday the company has never undertaken any dredging work in Eastern Canada and does not know why the firm or its dredging manager, John McDonald, have been charged.

Dillingham and McDonald are among three Lower Mainland firms and four local men charged Wednesday in Ottawa with fraud in connection with the dredging contracts.

The charges against Dillingham — and against Sceptre Dredging of Richmond, and its president, Frank Hamata — apparently arise from a 1971 contract for $800,000 for dredging at Ile d'Orleans, south of Quebec City on the St. Lawrence Seaway.

When asked about the Ile d'Orleans contract, Meyers denied the company had been party to the agreement.

"In short, we did not bid on the contract in question and we had no part in it," he said. "Dillingham has never taken part directly or indirectly in any dredging operations on the St. Lawrence Seaway or in Eastern Canada, nor have any of its officers or employees been involved in any such contracts.

"At this time, it appears that the government has decided to charge most, if not all, of the larger dredging contractors in Canada," he added.

Rising pressures signal the approach of a new high pressure area with its promise of sunny skies. A vigorous Pacific disturbance is moving towards the Gulf of Alaska with an extensive canopy of rain-bearing cloud nearing the Queen Charlotte Islands. The interval of sunny weather on the North coast is expected to be brief today before the rain mixed with some snow moves in. The system will progress down the coast and into the interior on Friday.

Most residents depend on well water, but the possibility ofconstruction of a pumping system was discussed at a recent EAST SOOKE RATEPAYERS' meeting with regional board representative Ron Dumont, said ratepayers' president Grace Horgan.

"It's understood that application for a water pipeline across Sooke Basin has been approved," she said.

One pipeline already supplies an East Sooke subdivision with tap water, but another would have to be built to handle the rest of the load, she said.

People who live in the WESTERN COMMUNITY of Metchosin, Colwood and Langford should think about everything from transportation problems to library services before they come to tonight's meeting sponsored by the Capital Regional Board.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Belmont-Fisher school lunchroom.

Chief regional planner Peter Hammer said there will be a presentation by staff and consultants characterizing the community and outlining its problems.

Residents will be free to give opinions on the capital region plan and discuss their own areas.

Although the board is talking about an office in the area so people can drop in and get acquainted with plans, it isn't definite yet.

Ruff, director of the provincial human rights branch, will speak at the YM-YWCA at noon that day.

The number to call for reservation is 386-6266.

"The AWE is composed of women concerned to promote active interest in all aspects of city life," said spokesman Nina Corley-Smith.

"It sends observers to all council meetings in the three local municipalities, and is strictly non-partisan."

The only non-profit day care centre in Colwood, Langford, Metchosin or Sooke, it was initiated by Dr. Charles Gregory of the Pacific Centre for Human Development.

All 20 available spaces were snapped up quickly, and there is now a waiting list, says supervisor Gerry Tromp.

She suggested mothers waiting day care contact the department of human resources which has an information line on such services.

One recommendation they sometimes make, she said, is that mothers utilize "family day care" within the city, in which children are taken into homes with several others each day.

A Capital City branch of the B.C. OLD AGE PENSIONERS ORGANIZATIONS will be formed in the Blanshard area if there is enough interest, says Sid Travers.

The group, concerned about the park's preservation, met recently with Ald. Clyde Savage and talked about possible construction of shower and change rooms near the park tennis courts.

"We're very much against any more buildings going into the park," said association publicity chairman Helen Forrest.

"Beacon Hill Park was never meant to be an athletic park."

She said the association opposed road construction when the issue arose some time ago and will continue to oppose it.

Link Provides Forum

Greater Victoria's newest newspaper, The Link, is a non-profit monthly news magazine which intends providing a forum where community groups and individuals can have their say.

While readers have shown considerable enthusiasm for the two issues to date, editor Jay Melmer said Tuesday, financial support has been lacking.

So there's a possibility The Link may merge with one or more other community newspapers such as those produced in James Bay, Fernwood and Victoria West.

The Link, which runs about 12 pages in tabloid format and sells for $3 a year, has been giving copies away. Press run is 2,500. So far, a staff of about eight volunteers has been working unpaid, Melmer said.

A hoped-for grant to support the paper failed to materialize. The Link accepts "selective advertissing," that is, ads which do not conflict with its objectives.

Melmer, 25, who has worked in radio, TV and newspapers, said the paper is assembled locally and printed in North Vancouver. Local offices are at 202, 1029 Douglas St.

Marriage, Divorce and Property

The Canadian Law Reform Commission's latest working paper asking for an equal sharing of family property when marriage ends in divorce is too simplistic. In recent years we have seen any number of famous cases where a divorce resulted in the female partner being financially martyred because existing family property laws are "almost totally inadequate" and discriminatory against women, as the commission notes. And while marriage is an "economic, social and cultural partnership" often one spouse contributes more than another.

Certainly the law must be revised more in favor of women. The separate property doctrine which governs current law has its roots in religion, politics and the economic penalties women have traditionally suffered by remaining at home and raising children. While this function doesn't earn them any money in the sense of a husband who is out in the work force, both functions are equally important and interdependent in a family. This fact should be recognized in law. Today, when many women are in the work force often contributing an equal amount to family maintenance they should be able to collect accrued dividends on their labor if the marriage dissolves.

The commission suggests three possible solutions. Retention of separate property laws, but the granting of discretionary powers to the courts; replacing the separate property doctrine with a community property law allowing equal division of the spoils during marriage and when divorce occurs; separate ownership of property during marriage but court-ordered transfers in the case of divorce to create an equalization of assets. None of the listed possibilities is perfect. If there is a separate property law during marriage, as two possibilities suggest, the woman in the home is effectively left at the mercy of her husband's generosity. The community property law envisioned in the second suggestion assumes each person has made an equal contribution, regardless of facts. And while there is no way around it, giving discretionary power of awards to the courts could also be dangerous considering the age, stratum and background from which most of our jurists are drawn.

Would it not be better to have communal property laws during a marriage, ensuring that both partners have equal rights as long as the relationship flourishes? If marriage fails the courts could have discretionary powers in awarding assets based on what each person contributed, tangibly and intangibly, to the partnership. Strict legal guidelines should also be instituted to ensure male chauvinism doesn't interfere with the adjudication of justice. Granted such reforms are long overdue in Canada's moribund legal system but they will affect other areas such as tax laws, and considering the far reaching effects of any changes, they should be thoroughly researched. When changes are made, whatever their form, decisions to marry or divorce will be as much a matter of economics as the flowers that bloom in the spring.

A Case of Rank Discrimination

When a crown corporation tenders a contract and receives two bids, one for $13,440, another for $6,769, reason dictates it would choose the cheaper bid and save the public money. Not so with B.C. Hydro which awarded a bus schedule printing contract to Colonist Printers for the $13,440 figure when Fleming Review Ltd. of Victoria offered to do the job for $6,769. The reason for the extra $6,671 outlay from the public purse: Colonist Printers is a union shop; Fleming Review Printing is not, and it is a stated government policy to deal only with union firms where possible under the Public Works Fair Employment Act.

It is understandable that any government would want to avoid dealing with a "sweat shop." But Fleming Review Printing says it pays union wages, and all available evidence points to its being a reputable firm. In this case, the government had bids from two reputable firms. It could have saved the taxpayers of this province $6,671 by choosing the non-union firm. This is only one example which has come to light. How many more are buried in the hinterland or have not been brought to public attention? And how much extra money has government and its corporations spent in order to bolster ideology?

The NDP has always thrown bones of this nature to the B.C. Federation of Labor. But when these "bones" interfere with efficient economic government and fair tendering practices, the government should think twice. Few people in this province would condone government contracts going to a disreputable employer who squeezed his staff. But many non-union enterprises operate just as fairly as union shops, in some non-union cases it may even be fairer, as a sense of co-operation rather than adversity exists between management and employees.

Rather than the current blanket edict that gives a stamp of approval to union shops and usually a "no" to non-union shops, the government should make its decisions on an individual basis. The current situation smells of kowtowing to the B.C. Federation of Labor and is grossly unfair to non-union enterprises. It is a case of frank discrimination — something which the NDP has promised to weed out rather than enshrine in law.

JAMES RESTON

A Good Man Who Can't Win

WASHINGTON — Elliott Richardson of Massachusetts is now on his way to London, by way of the Bahamas, to be the American ambassador to the court of St. James. In many ways, he is the most interesting figure on the American political scene today, maybe better qualified to be president in the last years of the 1970s than most candidates now in the race, but obviously not even in the running.

Richardson is not all that important in himself, but he is a symbol of the question Lord Bryce and many others have asked for generations: Why do the most qualified men in America not seek public office or make it to the White House?

Most times, the answer to this is that party authority and party loyalty eliminate "outsiders" like Wendell Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee against Roosevelt in 1940, but there is probably less party authority or party allegiance now than ever before in this century, yet qualified men like Richardson are not seriously considered.

Superb Lawyer

It is not that Richardson feels inferior to the other candidates. Modesty is not his outstanding personal quality. He is a well-educated, pragmatic man, with a vision of the distractions of local politics and the ambiguities of national and world affairs. He may be a little too handsome and too Harvard for popular national appeal, but he is a superb lawyer and administrator and is just about the right age in his middle 50s with just about the right record, and he has also the right kind of presidential presence to be a serious candidate in 1976.

Richardson has been around Washington for a long time. As a young man, he was clerk to Justice Felix Frankfurter in the Supreme Court of the United States. After that, he had every opportunity to make an outstanding career here in Washington. But he recalled here just before he left for London that Archibald Cox, his associate in the Nixon "Saturday night massacre," said to him: "To make a career in Washington you have to come from somewhere else; you have to have a home base." So he went back to Massachusetts but never did so well there politically as he has done in Washington.

In the last few years, he has been the best under secretary of state since Sumner Welles, secretary of health education and welfare, secretary of defence, and attorney-general. Nobody in the history of the republic has had so many important jobs for so short a time, and not because he handled them badly but because he did them all so well that he was pushed along into the next impossible vacancy.

ELLIOTT RICHARDSON

The result is that Richardson has built a reputation here for intelligence and efficiency, but has started almost everything and finished nothing, always considered for some other job, always on the move, and maybe now on his way to London, in the wrong direction.

He will undoubtedly be a good ambassador in Grosvenor Square. He is quiet, thoughtful, and articulate. The English will like him, partially because he is so much more articulate and attractive than his predecessor, Walter Annenberg, but also because he likes them, and he is very English himself. But his mission will take him out of the presidential struggle of 1976.

He may come back to Washington before the end of the year as secretary of state, if the present attacks on Henry Kissinger in congress, the universities and the press continue, but even then, as a Republican, he will not be in a position to run for the presidency.

Before he left Washington the other day for London, he said that he would get into the primary elections of 1976 if President Ford decided not to run. He added that he thought he would do "very well" in the primaries, that he wasn't as austere or "stiff" as most people thought, that he had run more than a million votes ahead of Barry Goldwater in Massachusetts in 1964, but that there was no point in talking about his political future, for obviously the president would be a candidate and could not be challenged by anybody.

He's Unlike JFK

In short, Richardson, for all his talents and ambitions and possibilities, is a man of the Republican establishment. He is not like Jack Kennedy, out of the combative Irish in Massachusetts, who felt that the Kennedys could knock over the party's organization. Richardson is a regular and will go along, taking and doing whatever job is available, like most other prominent members of his party.

The result is that we are probably going to be stuck with the old and traditional candidates of both parties in 1976: Ford, Rockefeller and Reagan on the Republican side; and Jackson, Humphrey and Muskie on the Democratic side, all in their 60s. For the political nominating system is stacked against outsiders like Richardson, and most of them would rather join the system in London than fight it with little chance of winning.

". . . if running is such good exercise how come the antelope lives ten years while the turtle lives a hundred and fifty . . ."

Enduring Film

On reading Nora Hutchison's review in the Times March 8 of The Night Porter I would have to say that she has missed the point of the film. To comment that "the point is that war corrupts and disables the spirit" illustrates the lack of depth in which she has viewed the film. It is a love story, pure and simple.

Whether or not their relationship can be considered abnormal or not is irrelevant for, as the film says, who is to say what is abnormal? If being normal can be defined as being a member of the majority, then the lovers' actions are perfectly justified. In the Nazi concentration camps, their sexual relationship was considered normal. After the war, the lovers entered a world drastically different than that of the camps, and while on the surface it appeared they were able to adjust (she, becoming the wife of a well known conductor, and he, becoming a night porter), their minds stayed entrenched in the mores of the concentration camp. When the two meet in a chance encounter after the war, the public veneer strips away, and they return to their old relationship. And it would have worked. Herein lies the tragedy of The Night Porter. If left to themselves, the lovers would have led a perfectly happy life, different perhaps, to us, but nevertheless happy. It is only through external forces acting upon them that their relationship is terminated, violently.

The point of The Night Porter, then, is that while love is a completely subjective, personal relationship between individuals, society will condemn that love if it does not fit into that society's definition of love.

If Ms. Hutchison wishes to see a film that is truly "perverse, brutal and offensive," I would suggest any of the "ultra-violence" films, such as The Texas Chainsaw Massacre. But please don't attach such derogatory terms to The Night Porter. It is an extraordinary film which will endure long after the "ultra-violence" and "natural disaster" films have found their final resting place.—P. Vincent, 850 Cormorant Street.

Succession Duties

I note that Bill Bennett the leader of the Social Credit party has announced that if and when his party comes to power, steps will be taken to abolish the gift and succession taxes. As the succession taxes at present in force in B.C. are very moderate and do not in any way hurt the ordinary citizen it is obvious that this change will only benefit the wealthy few and of course the loss of such taxes to the treasury will have to come from other sources. The rich will get richer and poor poorer.

It should also be noted that Bill Bennett, who aspires to be the next premier of our province, threw a challenge to Bob Strachan, the minister of transport, to come outside into the corridor when they were hotly debating some subject in the Legislature.

Surely such action is the epic of immaturity and hardly worthy of a man who feels he could lead this province. I trust the voters will remember this. — M. P. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Excellent Article

The Craigdarroch Castle Preservation Society is most appreciative of the excellent article in your March 8 edition, so ably written by your columnist Max Low.

He captured the spirit of our Greater Victoria community endeavor, and presented it to the public in most pleasing and factual fashion.

The castle society has its ups and downs, more ups, really, than downs and we are not easily discouraged, for we are convinced that the preservation of Craigdarroch is important to Victoria and British Columbia.

We had a bad "down" in recent days, when the Victoria junior chamber of commerce withdrew its $25 a year sustaining membership in the society.

Rick Burgess, president of the Jaycees wrote: "In reference to our past membership in the castle society, we will not be renewing our membership this year.

"We had found this advisable when we were associated with the Emily Carr foundation, but, as we have donated to the province of British Columbia, the foundation and the house, I might suggest that you contact the department of public works, province of British Columbia."

CRAIGDARROCH
. . . ups and downs

The province of British Columbia this year is making a $9,000 grant to the society, all of which will be used on improving the castle.

It is, however, a very great blow to the society to lose the support of so prestigious and influential a group of young businessmen as represented by the Victoria junior chamber of commerce.

Police Union View

There is much that has to be brought to the attention of the people of Esquimalt regarding the current civic labor dispute.

In the first instant the employees of Esquimalt, members of C.U.P.E. Local 333, are not on strike, they are not working because management, your elected representatives have decided that they will not work. Management has decided on your behalf to deprive you of the services of your employees, by locking them out.

I understand this decision was made in response to an idea fostered by management of another municipality, I believe the city of Victoria put our mayor and the mayors of the other municipalities in this position, not to help them (Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt) but rather use these three as levers to the benefit of Victoria. Historically the city of Victoria administration has had little or no regard for their civic employees, where as in the surrounding municipalities we have for the most part been able to resolve our problems in much the manner as is done in the family. I, put it to you people of Esquimalt, what does management of the city of Victoria care about you or your civic employees? Unless you are totally blind, you must realize by now they care absolutely nothing for you and yours.

It has been reported to me that many of the "volunteers" manning the communications system in our police office are not really volunteers but in fact they are being solicited by our management, on the pretense that the police department needs help. This is not true, in fact, these untrained people are more a hinderance to the police operation than they are a help. For our own protection, one of our policemen must remain in the station to oversee this "volunteer" to be certain that proper information is obtained and transmitted, between the public and the policemen on duty, in order that a proper job be done. There is a very real danger of serious problems arising out of inexperienced people operating a system that is the very nerve centre of the operation. It is obvious to us that management here in Esquimalt has little regard for the decision made by the labor relations board, for they are making a mockery of it. We, policemen, feel that our administration has about the same regard for the operation of the police and fire service by the way they are handling the situation. We, policemen in Esquimalt, are the ones wearing the embarrassment of this mockery, we feel that our administration is making a laughing stock of our department.

I wonder how many people in Esquimalt realize the type of person that has been answering the phones in the police station.

I approached the mayor after the Labor Relations Board decision was handed down and asked for a meeting with management, the police union and the civic workers' union. I suggested that in the best interest of the people of Esquimalt we should get together immediately, that a plan to resolve this problem can be worked out, that would be acceptable to all concerned. I am still waiting for the mayor's answer and a week and a half has gone by.

The position of the Esquimalt police has always been that we do not want to become involved in this dispute that we wish to go about our business and do our jobs as we have always done. At no time was there any discussion among the policemen even suggesting a withdrawal of services, a slowdown or any interruption of our services.

I sincerely ask the people of Esquimalt to take the time to read this open letter over until they understand what I have attempted to say and if you do, I then ask you to contact your elected officials and tell them, yes tell them that you want things to return to normal. After all you are paying the bills, but you are not getting the service and that is a rip-off. If you agree with me, drop me a line at the Esquimalt Police Station. Even if you don't agree, let me know. I'm not always right. — P. F. MacDonald, President Esquimalt Police Union, 1229 Esquimalt Road.

The annual tea of the Lady Douglas chapter of the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire, to be held in two days' time at the Empress Hotel in commemoration of the landing here 72 years ago tomorrow of Sir James Douglas, is being picturesquely advertised by means of posters done by some members of the chapter. A Typical Canadian?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

ROME — Time and again over the past seven years, aides to Pierre Trudeau have told me that the prime minister gets "up tight" about speech-making; that he hates to encounter impromptu situations which call for public remarks; that he likes to have speeches, even short toasts, in text form; that he hesitates to "wing it", using the texts only occasioally for touchstones; and that he gets wrung out from a series of public performances.

I never disbelieved such remarks but I see the proof of them on this European junket.

At the Canadian Embassy, a band from Neil McNeil College in Toronto played in the garden as the prime minister shook hands inside with the embassy staff. When he came out onto the terrace to meet the band conductor and Father Geart, the priest in charge of the college tourists, he didn't know quite how to handle it.

I hollered "speech" a few times, drawing odd looks from most people and a dirty glance from the PM.

He did want to get over to the kids, a nice mob in maroon blazers and grey flannels, but he couldn't bring himself to throwing his voice or rounding up his thoughts, so he spoke in a rather embarrassed fasion, loud enough only for the first row or two to hear. He said how marvellous it was to meet them there and to see young Canadians getting a cultural touch with the old world.

But the whole episode, including listening to "A Place to Stand, Ontario", was terribly awkward.

A similar shyness reigned in his performance as speaker at the evening gathering in what really is the Roman city hall. There, the setting was intimidating, with a magnificent wide hall and vivid tapestries looming round with scenes from Roman history. One would like to have had, after the flowery welcome from the mayor of Rome, a speech full of emotion, given with some panache. Instead, we got another "read". The content was nice, delivered all in French, but it didn't grip. He was going through the motions . . . barely, and it took it out of him.

I have wondered why five days of a 16-day trip away from home should be given over to skiing, far from the maddening crowd, and so clearly designed to drop off the accompanying media mob.

Frankly, the man needs it. If he didn't have the long breaks and the physical activity, I think he'd have the same kind of psychiatric problems which befell his wife last fall.

Mr. Trudeau is tough enough. He's ascetic in his approach to food and time and what one might call convivial or gregarious situations (which he detests) but he definitely has to think carefully of what he has to give when duty requires him to play formal roles in public as the head of the Canadian government.

If, as I read it, this whole long tour is a feat of duty over inclination, he gets through it — but only just.

For a man who spent an inordinately long youth wandering the world in a remarkably simple fashion, there's an irony in his involvement in such a surfeit of formalities with salutes and inspections of guards and formal state dinners and the whisk of motorcades with big police escorts and the omnipresence of cameras.

What becomes clearer to me is that he has become a rather typical Canadian of his generation, much involved and intent on domestic situations and our politics, and far from the image, which I think has persisted as a heritage from 1968, of Trudeau as the sophisticated man of the world with the reach of mind and the intelecvtua attainments to be a major world figure.

Credibility and the Columbia Put Williams Out on a Limb

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

As the latest flurry over the Columbia River Treaty slowly subsides, at least for the moment, the question that continues to rouse puzzled, and hostile, speculation is the curious role played by Resources Minister Bob Williams.

Most theories see him as the star performer in a scenario designed to discredit the "new" Social Credit with scandals of the past.

Under that theory, his performance to date has been a bit of a flop, and observers are left with two choices: either the minister has bungled the whole affair or he is part of a much deeper plot yet to be unfolded.

Proponents of the bungling theory point out that the minister has looked foolish on more than one occasion in the last three weeks and much of the anger and hostility generated in the controversy has focused on him rather than the Columbia treaty.

Those who see more sinister or intriguing plots ready to unfold argue that Williams is a bright man and an astute politician who wouldn't allow himself to be backed into a corner. Clearly, they argue, more revelations are to come and the wily minister will be vindicated.

A less provoking but more plausible theory, however, is that Williams was more the victim of circumstance than the director of intrigue.

The circumstance was a CBC documentary on the Columbia River Treaty which studied the history and the results of the 1964 agreement between Canada, B.C. and the U.S. and left viewers with the clear impression the treaty was an economic and environmental disaster for B.C.

Aired just two days before the opening of the spring session, the NDP was quite naturally gleeful about the show, which supported the party's long-standing opposition to what the former Social Credit government considered one of its crowning achievements.

When the documentary's reference to a secret "cost cover-up" committee within B.C. Hydro was raised on the floor of the legislature, Williams said he had not known of the committee until he saw the show. He promised to look into the matter.

He later confirmed the existence of the committee, designed to study ways of reallocating costs of the Columbia dams to other projects or government departments, and two days following he tabled a complete file of minutes relating to the committee's activities in 1967.

The minister was careful not to make any charges about whether recommendations for cost reallocation were forwarded to the government or whether any costs were actually allocated to other budgets, but he clearly indicated the committee was secret and he implied, by way of innuendo, that the committee was the result of attempts to camouflage cost overruns of the three Columbia River dam projects.

Release of the committee's minutes won the NDP a rash of headlines but then the whole affair seemed to backfire in Williams' face.

Hugh Keenleyside, the former Hydro co-chairman who appointed the committee, provided the press with a sound rationale for the committee's existence. It wasn't secret, he said; it was struck on his initiative because he hoped to convince an unwilling Social Credit administration to assume some of the additional costs of the dam projects.

Williams, according to Keenleyside, was trying to deliberately mislead the plublic by implying wrongdoing on his part.

Even Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey), the legislature's most vocal opponent of the Columbia River Treaty, was not impressed with Williams' performance. The committee file proved nothing, he said, and it was now a question of honor that Williams call an inquiry into the matter.

The minister had been vague about the source of the committee file and later announced he had received it from Dalhousie University professor Ian McDougall, who worked in 1973 and 1974 on an intensive study of the legal and financial aspects of renegotiating the Columbia treaty.

Conversations with McDougall raised some interesting questions about Williams' statements to the house.

The minister had insisted he knew nothing about the committee until the CBC documentary, but McDougall said he had forwarded Williams a copy of the committee's files when he completed his study a year ago.

Williams stuck by his story, however, saying he only scanned McDougall's report on the treaty.

McDougall also revealed it was his staff that attached the "confidential" label on the committee's file. The label was the only concrete evidence Williams had that the group had been secret.

Demands for an investigation grew louder and the government finally relented and agreed some form of outside inquiry would be held.

But Williams put his foot in his mouth once more, declaring that John Krutilla, a U.S. resource economist who wrote a book on the subject, would be called to the inquiry.

Krutilla had appeared on the CBC documentary, said Williams, and had indicated that two of the three Columbia dams were redundant. This evidence would prove, said the minister, that B.C. had an incompetent group of negotiators.

★ ★ ★

Quite the contrary, however. Krutilla, despite his theory that two dams might have been unnecessary, believes the treaty was a good one for B.C. and he says Canada had highly skilled negotiators.

Williams admitted later he had not read Krutilla's book or discussed his theories with him.

If the minister only scanned the report he commissioned on the treaty and had never even read Krutilla's book, it appears he is reluctant to make the Columbia treaty a political issue at this time. He was not in the legislature, after all, when the greatest battles over the treaty were fought in the early 1960s.

And while government sources have indicated the NDP hopes to bring up some old Socred scandals this session, the Columbia treaty was apparently not on the agenda.

Government members knew the CBC program was coming up; Williams' department had assisted with some of the research, and the government was more than pleased with the results. When the issue was raised on the floor of the house, the NDP was quite willing to make some mileage on the issue so Williams went to work to find out about the committee.

Williams tabled the committee's files and made it clear he hoped people would deal with the "real issues" of whether there was a cost cover-up and whether the treaty was a financial disaster for B.C.

Instead, people became more concerned about Williams' motives in the case and his own credibility emerged as the issue.

Williams apparently hoped he could simply table the information and then decline responsibility for it. By refusing to answer questions fully, in and out of the house, he created an aura of suspicion, especially in light of McDougall's statements.

It seems obvious the government did not want an inquiry at this time, despite the NDP's certainty the treaty was a bad deal and despite its hopes, in the long run, to be able to renegotiate the agreement and win some better terms for B.C.

An inquiry is a risky precedent for a government charged with incompetence in its own financial dealings and involved in a growing number of Crown corporations and companies.

But the government was backed into a corner. Williams said he was only answering a question from across the floor but once he made the committee file public, he also made accusations by way of implication and the government automatically, and unwittingly, had a fiery issue on its hands. An inquiry was the only way out.

FREE MARKET THEORIES FAILING

Power Goes With Economics

By LEONARD SILK
New York Times

The rise of powerful corporations and trusts has created, in the view of the critics of classical liberalism, a private version of state power.

The view of the way domestic economy is dominated by those with power is not so much denied as ignored by the majority of conventional economists.

But it is becoming more difficult for economists to avoid the analysis of power, and its inclusion as an element in national economic policy — thanks to the Arab oil embargo of late 1973 and 1974, and the subsequent quintupling of oil prices.

That use of political-economic power has imposed both inflationary and recessionary strains on the Western world and led to enormous strains on the world monetary systems for which conventional theory is unprepared.

Built on the foundations of Adam Smith's 18th-century liberalism, contemporary economics has either ignored the significance of power or sought ways to minimize the use of power in matters affecting the production and distribution of wealth.

The market has been the economist's great alternative to the state in economic decision-making; more than that, it is seen as the natural foe and check upon the state.

The market's superiority over the state, its champions have insisted, is its greater efficiency. A free price system results in a better allocation of resources than kings, dictators or bureaucrats could achieve. And the market provides greater incentives toward production — because it hitches the economy to the strongest, steadiest force there is: the pursuit by people of their self-interest.

Most Western economists—including those in the U.S. administration, at the World Bank, and the International Monetary Fund, and in Western European governments — seem bent on finding ways to "recycle" the hundreds of billions of petrodollars resulting from the use of cartel power by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — and to make the world safe for OCPEC. But not all economists take that position.

BURNS
. . . warns of danger

For instance, Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, considers the efforts of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to bring the oil-importing countries together with the OPEC states and to set a floor price under oil a blunder and an outrage.

He sees such a move as giving OPEC precisely what it wants — a secure market for its oil, secure financial assets with high-yielding returns and protection against the downward pressures on oil prices that are developing in the world market.

Further, Burns declares that a link between the U.S. and OPEC would undermine the entire American moral position.

For similar reasons, he is highly critical of the willingness of most administration officials to see Iran acquire a 13-per-cent interest — which he believes will clearly constitute control — of Pan American World Airways.

Burns feels that the U.S. government should have sat down with a half dozen major U.S. oil companies, heavy with profits, and persuaded them to put up $50-million each to rescue Pan Am.

What he sees is a drift of power, accompanying the massive shift of money, to the OPEC countries, and he believes such power will be used dangerously.

Instead of the Western powers sitting back and concocting plans to oblige and accommodate the cartel that opened economic warfare against them, Burns wants the U.S. and the others to put heavier pressure on those oil-exporting states — economic pressure, especially through serious conservation programs, involving rationing if need be, to break the oil cartel and bring down oil prices in a major way, not a minor cut that will leave financial and political power flowing to the Middle East.

The Federal Reserve chairman, a passionate champion of the market and of the principles of indiviual liberty, is thus being driven by the realities of international conflict and disorder to modify his own belief in the virtues of the free market.

Is the market really an adequate opponent to internationally organized power? Apparently not. Then must one use the power of the state — for the sake of liberal and democratic principles — to fight the power of other states?

This is the issue that the OPEC oil cartel has raised, the classic liberal paradox in a new, international setting.

Ironically, the thrust of OPEC and the efforts of the Western liberal democracies to cope with it could lead to industrial cartels, regional blocs, national drives for self-sufficiency, state bargaining or economic warfare, central planning and control — the antithesis of the liberal principles that the disciples of Adam Smith still revere. But the alternative would appear to be a handing over of liberal principle and power — in the name of the free market.

CANADIAN CONTENT—THE HARD WAY

By GARY LAUTENS

Now that Time has been given notice by Ottawa, several publishers are interested in putting out the first Canadian newsmagazine.

However, they've been warned their publications must have a high content of Canadian news.

Getting a Canadian "angle" to a story is sometimes difficult; in fact, you may soon be reading items like these:

"We were at Heathrow airport in June of 1971," Tom told reporters. "My wife and I were only 200 yards from the very spot where the hijackers pulled their guns and took over the plane.

"When I think we could have been locked up in that jet now with 325 other passengers instead of here in Regina, well, it gives me the shakes.

"My wife still hasn't settled down. That was too close for comfort."

Meanwhile the hijacked liner was reported down 4,750 miles east of Halifax after a dogfight with unidentified non-Canadian fighter planes.

NEW DELHI — The nuclear bomb fired by the Indian government earlier this week at Peking contained components made of Canadian nickel.

LONDON — A Canadian family touring through the central core of London was involved in a two-car collision last week near Harrods department store.

W. D. Ffolkes-Wagen, his wife and three children, ages 6, 8 and 11, were not injured.

However, occupants of the other car were taken to hospital. They were identified by police as Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

OTTAWA — Health department officials say no Canadians have been affected by the flu epidenic that has swept through Romania in the past month, leaving an estimated 30,000 victims in its wake.

According to the department, these are the latest statistics on the disease, province by province: B.C. 0, Alberta 0, Saskatchewan 0, Manitoba 0, Ontario 0, Quebec 0, Nova Scotia 0, New Brunswick 0, P.E.I. 0, Newfoundland 0.

INNSBRUCK — Tiger Bruce Swartzkopf, mogul-mastering madcap from Moose Jaw (where he cracks his knuckles in the off season), finished 35th over the weekend in the downhill event at the world ski championships.

"The course was in perfect condition and I was delighted with my fast start," he commented after the race. "If it had not been for the avalanche that buried the Italian team, I might even have bettered my time."

The event was won by an Austrian, with a French skier and another Austrian rounding out the first three.

Steel Mill Site Study Planned

A social impact study covering 11 possible sites for a new steel mill complex will be undertaken soon, Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Wednesday.

He said the study, which will include assessment of economic and environmental impact, will be the second phase of a study conducted by a special committee working with his department. The committee includes delegates from Japanese industry.

"We may eliminate a few of the 11 sites for environmental reasons at the outset of Phase 2), but we'd like to keep as many on the strings as possible being considered, he said. When the first phase is completed sites will be disclosed.

During question period in the house Lauk was asked a string of questions.

Pat Jordan (SC-South Okanagan) asked how Lauk could allow half the sites under consideration to be prime recreation and environmental locations, in particular Qualicum.

"It's impossible to get a balanced picture of the information," said Lauk.

The committee, now in Japan, has been given authority to examine all sites that could support a steel complex and more than 10 or 11 are

She wanted assurance that the government would not allow development there.

Lauk said, when the information is received the government will analyse the facts. He added that although unemployment is being considered, it is not the priority in establishing a site for the steel mill.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett asked for information on areas experiencing unemployment levels exceeding the provincial average, and the minister said the situation is being analysed.

PITY SMALL BUSINESS, SOCRED TELLS BARRETT

Premier Barrett should spend some time in the offices of small businessmen around the province, a Socred MLA suggested in the legislature Wednesday. Don Phillips (South Peace) said Barrett has never had a true appreciation of what it's like to have his salary taxed away. "He should see firsthand the assets eroded away by inflation," said Phillips.

Small businesses are finding it increasingly difficult to stay in business because of the government's policies, he said.

"The premier's new blue suit from George Straith won't change his image; he has the image of a clown, a comedian," said Phillips.

The government's budget is a final attempt to buy the people of B.C. with their own money, Phillips charged. It's almost unique in its distribution of poverty, not only for 1975, he said, but for years ahead, and there's not one proposal for long-range job creation.

"It's the opposite of a job security budget."

Farm Bill Lauded

The Quebec government is planning a farm income assurance program patterned after the B.C. plan and two other provinces are also considering programs, Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Wednesday.

Speaking during budget speech debate, Stupich described the income program as one of the most successful of the NDP government's 19 new agriculture bills. The opposition voted against the bill, said Stupich, but now the B.C. Federation of Agriculture recognize the industry is more stable with an income assurnace program.

For 10 years farmers were dropping out of the industry at the rate of one per day, said Stupich, but now that exodus has come to a halt, the number of farms are increasing in B.C. and young people are moving into the industry.

The once-controversial land commission was also defended by Stupich.

He said of 12 regional districts with the most arable land in the province, only 7.2 per cent of the land has been planced in the agricultural reserve.

Those regions comprise 14,266,240 acres and only 1,025,367 acres have been placed in reserve.

Outside the house, Stupich said when all 28 districts complete their agricultural reserve plans, probably more like five per cent of the land will be within the reserves.

Firearm Registry Urged by Gardom

The provincial government should show common sense and crack down on the possession of restricted weapons in B.C., a Liberal MLA said in the legislature Wednesday.

Garde Gardom said crime and violence is running rampant in B.C. and a central registry should be established to control ownership of guns.

The registry should record transfers and sales, and all gun dealers in the province should be licensed.

He said the age of purchasers should be recorded and that it be illegal to sell guns to persons with a history of mental illness, or ex-convicts.

"Gun controls won't necessarily stop crime, but it will cut down on it and aid in detection and prevention," said Gardom.

Speaking in the budget debate, the Vancouver-Point Grey MLA slammed the government for policies that have "the direction of education in B.C. spinning in neutral; housing a flop, phoney government ads, and shabby treatment of municipalities."

"There's nothing innovative about the programs; they are just responses to the obvious needs. I congratualte the premier for his charm."

SPECIAL SPRING PRICES

Hospital Bill: $359M

Hospital care for B.C. residents cost $983,000 a day during 1974, the BC. Hospital Insurance Service annual report says.

In the fiscal year ending March 31 an estimated $359 million will be paid by the service to hospitals toward expenses for health care.

Tabled in the legislature Wednesday by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, the report says the majority of new inpatient hospital accommodation shows few additional general hospital beds being provided for increased population.

"The more effective utilization of general hospitals, the expanded coverage of out-patient care by B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and the greater availability of extended-care beds are having an impact on the need for acute accommodation."

Acute-care patient days for adults and children in B.C. public hospitals decreased by about 22,000 despite an increase in population.

The average hospital stay for adults and children has been steadily decreasing, resulting in an all-time low of 8.5 days in 1974, the report says.

An increase in the use of day-care surgery, the report says, is reflected in considerable saving and increased use. More than 50,000 procedures were carried out under the program in 1974.

A reporting system for therapeutic abortions performed in hospitals in B.C. indicates 9,192 abortions in 1973, which represents 27 per 100 live births.

In 1974 there were 113 public general hospitals accepting BCHIS patients. Some 386,444 adult and children patients were discharged from hospitals, an increase of 8,725 over 1973.

BACKBENCHER TURNS CRITIC

Backbencher Colin Gabelmann said Wednesday in the legislature he did not intend to follow the lead of his fellow NDP MLAs of simply praising the budget and patting the government on the back.

It is more constructive, he said, to criticize the government, make suggestions and discuss his views on the problems in his own constituency.

Some of those suggestions included:

—a comprehensive labor standards bill which would tie together all other legislation covering work standards.

—changes in the labor code to ensure union protection for a growing group of middle management and professional people now excluded from union representation;

—breast cancer detection clinics around the province as a means of virtually eliminating the problem in B.C.;

—Initiation of planning for a tunnel under Burrard Inlet;

Gablemann said B.C.'s elections legislation is the worst in Canada and he hoped the province's electoral reform legislation will encourage more people to vote.

The MLA also criticized the press. But, unlike other NDP members, Gabelmann said he believes the NDP is getting a "fair shake" from the media, with the exception of most editorial pages. But people who own newspapers should be free to write what they wish on those editorial pages, he added.

The problem, he said, is the coverage given to the legislature in general.

Events in the legislature are not treated as front page news, he said, and many speeches made in the house are not even reported.

MLA Who Was Teacher Recalls SC Blacklisting

An NDP MLA told the legislature Wednesday he suspects he was once on an educational blacklist because of his politics and his desire for educational change.

Harold Steves (NDP—Richmond) said while he was teaching in Richmond five or six years ago, his wife was also looking for a job in the area.

She tried for three years to get a job until a local education supervisor suggested she would never get a job in Richmond because of her name.

The MLA said he couldn't be fired because he had tenure, but he felt the blacklisting was because of his association with the NDP and his role in seeking educational changes.

Steves also emphasized the lack of housing and rental accommodation in his constituency and cited one landlord who he said has been holding units off the market.

Steves said he has asked Attorney-General Alex Macdonald to investigate the conversion of two apartments to 99-year lease premises by apartment-owner George Mulek.

According to the MLA, Mulek avoided legislation introduced last spring to control strata title and condominium conversions, by leasing both buildings to another company under his ownership.

Each of the 100 units in the two buildings was then offered for sub-lease for a 99-year term and was not subject to the conditions concerning eviction of tenants under last year's legislation.

Steves said he did not know whether the loophole is legal but said it is immoral.

If the attorney-general finds the system is legal, a freeze should be placed on all the units not already sold and the freeze should apply to any other units created in a similar fashion throughout the province, he said.

Instead of evicting the existing tenants in the building, said Steves, Mulek simply sold the units to somebody else and forced them to evict the tenants.

Mulek converted the building to avoid rent controls, said Steves.

Rents in the building were originally $195 he said, and under the conversion scheme the purchaser must pay $2,000 down (originally it was $5,000) and $298 a month.

Steves said it is dangerous and criminal for Mulek and some other landlords to hold suites off the market because they are hoping to sell them rather than rent.

Mulek has holdings in Victoria, including the Orchard House highrise apartment in James Bay — where some former rental suites have been sold on 99-year leases — and the View Towers block at Quadra and View.

Local Property Sales Up 28% in February

The pace of real estate sales continues to pick up in Victoria with $10.9 million worth of property sold through the multiple listing service in February, up 28.4 per cent from $8.5 million in the same month a year ago.

There were 232 real estate sales through MLS in February, up 36 per cent from 171 the previous February and up from 192 sales in January.

The statistics were released Wednesday by the Victoria Real Estate Board.

The average price of property sold in February was $47,190, down $2,670 from an average of $49,860 the previous February, but this did not mean house prices were lower than a year ago.

Prices for average transactions were much higher in January.

As a result, the average real estate transaction in the first two months was at $48,900 this year, more than $5,000 above the average sale in the first two months of 1974.

The board cautions against translating average property sale prices into average house prices. The average property sale price includes the average of various types of real estate sold during the month, including lots and apartments.

Sales volume so far this year is 424 units selling for a total of $20.7 million in the first two months. This is up from 367 units worth $15.8 million in the first two months of 1974.

The board rates the number of listings available at the present time as adequate, although an increased demand for houses as a result of lower mortgage interest rates could result in a shortage of properties by June.

There were 374 listings received by MLS in January and another 434 in February.

FOREST CUT 'UNDERVALUED'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Scandinavia produces almost 1.6 times the volume of timber produced in B.C. from forests that are only about half as large, says Resources Minister Bob Williams.

The minister told graduates of the Univerity of B.C.'s forestry class the information comes from a report by a Scandinavian firm of consultants retained by the government.

He said the study was ordered because the government thought it would be worthwhile to bring in an outside firm to study the differences between logging methods here and in other countries.

"In the international comparison, the present annual allowable cut in B.C. in relation to the existing resources and productive capacity of the forest land is rather undervalued," he said.

"For instance, Scandinavia at present produces almost 1.6 times the volume removed from the B.C. forests from a total growing stock which is 45 per cent of that in B.C."

Brothers Want New School Named for Great-Grandad

Two brothers who are both Greater Victoria school principals asked school board trustees Tuesday to name a new high school after their great-grandfather, John Irvine.

Horace Dawson, principal of S. J. Willis junior secondary school, and Irvine Dawson, principal of Monterey elementary school, want the new high school to be built near Lambrick Park named after their forbear.

John Irvine was a pioneer who came to Victoria in 1851 to work for the Hudson's Bay Company and later farmed 300 acres in the Gordon Head area, the brothers told trustees at a committee meeting of the school board.

Three Victoria schools, Cedar Hill junior secondary, Campus View elementary and Mt. Douglas senior secondary, now stand on what was once Irvine's farm, they said.

Trustees were hesitant to commit themselves to the proposed name, John Irvine secondary school, but promised to discuss the idea in an in-camera meeting.

Construction on the new $2 million junior-senior secondary school, which will have a maximum capacity of 518 students, is expected to begin this spring.

Art Works Recovered

PARIS (Reuter) — Fourteen stolen paintings, among them works by Courbet, Van Dongen, Renoir and Pissaro, have been recovered after a six-month inquiry, police said Tuesday. The paintings, stolen from two Paris art galleries last September and October, were found in a Paris apartment. A 23-year-old Corsican, Philippe Orsini, was held for questioning.

Air Canada clears the air about European airfares.

If you're thinking of going to Europe for a holiday this summer, you've probably been shopping around to find the most economical way to go. And unless you're in the travel business, we're willing to bet that you're having a tough time figuring it all out.

So that's why we've written this advertisement. To clear the air and to help you choose the best fare to suit your pocket and holiday needs.

Yes, there are a lot of complications and prices, but here from Air Canada are the three most economical ways to get to Europe on an individual return fare, confirmed seat basis:

1. Charter (known as Advance Booking Charters—ABCs)
2. Advance Purchase Excursion Fares (known as APEX)
3. Economy Excursion Fares (22-45 Days)

They all have their own advantages and disadvantages, depending upon what you can afford, who you want to take and what you want to do on your holiday. They have been designed to meet the needs of most Canadians going to Europe on summer holidays, most of whom travel for 3 weeks or more. And so that we at Air Canada can plan our flights and organisation so we can continue to offer a regular, reliable and comprehensive range of flights to Europe in these days of rising expenses.

Here are the advantages and restrictions of each fare, together with one example at each level. These will help you to understand the different types and to decide which is the best way for you to go. But we can't tell you everything in one advertisement. So go to your Travel Agency, they have all the details and can handle your bookings and payments. And their advice is completely free of charge.

So there it is. Just work out what your European holiday travel plans are likely to be and who will be travelling, then decide which is the fare for you.

There are other fares available too: like Youth standby fares, GITs (Group Inclusive Tour fares which have to be purchased in conjunction with land arrangements and as part of a group) and of course the higher but very straight forward Economy fare for people travelling for a very short time or an extended stay—up to one year.

We hope we've helped clear the air for you on European air fares. Now go and talk to your Travel Agent, or to us.

Ultimatum to Settle Cut-Off Land Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives of 23 Indian bands decided to give the provincial government until April 1 to move towards settling the dispute over cut-off lands.

George Watts, spokesman for the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, said that unless the ultimatum is met, "We're going to start using some of the cut-off lands and start occupying it and start harvesting some of the resources of the cut-off lands involved."

The lands, some 36,000 acres, are called cut-off lands because they were cut off existing Indian reserve between 1913 and 1916 by a royal commission.

After a recent meeting with the union, federal Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said the actions of the 1912 McKenna-McBride Commission were immoral.

Watts said cut-off lands occupied by private individuals would not be occupied.

He said if the government refused to negotiate there would be demonstrations across the province.

The union has said any settlement of the cut-off land should not be considered as even a partial settlement of the general B.C. Indian land claims.

Under union proposals, the bands want the return of land or alternating land of equal value, and generally reject cash settlements. But each of the bands would negotiate separately once procedures have been agreed on.

$350 FINE FOR LEAVING CAR LITTER

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Mark Dennis, 20, of Burnaby, was fined $350 in provincial court Tuesday for littering. He was found guilty of abandoning a stripped-down car in the remote Chowade River Country, about 140 miles northwest of here. The charge was laid in November but Dennis failed to appear three times and was convicted ex-parte by Provincial Court Judge Thomas Mitchell.

Coyote-Harassing Nets $1,000 Fine

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Three men who harassed two coyotes with snowmobiles while participating in a course that included humane trapping methods were fined a total of $1,000 in provincial court here Wednesday.

They had previously pleaded guilty to the charges of harassing wildlife in an incident Feb. 25 on ice covered Nukko Lake, 22 miles northwest of here.

Gerald Meryle Hartman, 55, was fined $400 and prohibited from driving a snowmobile for 11 months. Ronald Henry Smurthwaite, 42, of Stewart and Bill Jackson, 21, of Whitehorse, Y.T., were fined $300 each.

A fourth man, course instructor Joseph Carty, pleaded not guilty and was remanded for trial to Friday.

Court was told that four members of a class of 12 took off on snowmobiles after two coyotes were seen crossing the lake. The men were chased away from the animals after being spotted from the air by a commercial pilto who reported the incident.

Soccer: Pros to Play So Children Can Walk

Now it's professional soccer which will make a one-night stand in Victoria. The occasion is the visit here next month of the Vancouver Whitecaps and the Los Angeles Aztecs of the North American Soccer League. And if this isn't filip enough for the football fan, the proceeds are going to a worthy cause — the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children.

This is the second season for the Whitecaps in the NASL and as far as general manager Denny Veitch is concerned it promises to be an ongoing year.

"We will finish first or second, perhaps second, in our division," he stated. "Our division will win the NASL championship again. We were fourth in atttendance last year and we will be third this season behind Seattle and San Jose."

So it's the time of the year for flat-out optimism, and with the Aztecs as defending NASL champions, perhaps he has a point. As to attendance, he offered another tip. "Go to Seattle and buy up a lot of season's tickets, and you can make money by scalping them at the gate."

If that is an indication of how popular the sport is becoming, Veitch also stated that the boom is on for soccer all over the United States, which up until now has been mostly cool toward the world's No. 1 attraction in spectator appeal.

Little League Now No. 2

"United States Colleges are now offering scholarships for soccer," he declared, "and soccer has passed Little League baseball in participation," he added.

Last year the Whitecaps averaged 10,600 for the season with a base of about 3,000 season ticket holders; and this year, under a revised seating plan and ticket structure which caters to family rates, he hopes to see the season-ticket total hit 5,000 and the overall crowd totals reach a new high.

Meanwhile, if the lineup of the Whitecaps hasn't definitely been established yet, there are several excellent reasons why not. One is that upwards of 30 players have been attending pre-season workouts, which began in December, and also competing in another new game — indoor soccer, which Veitch describes as "tremendous".

Another is that coach Jim Easton is currently in Britain on a scouting and selling trip. He hopes to sign up at least five professionals, one of whom is at least a name player insofar as Victoria fans are concerned.

He is Bruce Twamley, a product of city soccer who made the jump to pro ranks successfully and now is a regular with Ipswich Town of the English League first division. His appearance, however, may be more difficult than simply stating the fact, because Ipswich is in the thick of the fight for the league championship and, not only that, is still alive in the prestigious Football Association Cup.

And a 'Striker' Even

Ipswich Town and Leeds played to a 1-1 tie Tuesday in their second match of the quarter-final series and now face another replay. Winner will meet West Ham in the semi-finals on April 5 and that seemingly would rule out Twamley's appearance here on April 4. So maybe later.

Easton, however, has other irons in the fire, and two of the newest Whitecaps will likely come from Stoke City and Celtic. Although no names were mentioned, Veitch said one player was a "striker", but he wasn't sure if it was in good taste to use that term here.

Easton is a Glaswegian by birth and a veteran of 13 seasons in the Scottish First Division, first with Hibernian and then with Dundee. He coached and played in the Scottish second division in 1972, and in 1973 was a player and assistant coach with Miami Toros of the NASL before joining the Whitecaps in 1974. So he has the history and hopefully the connections to acquire only the best.

The purpose of the exhibition — co-sponsored by CFAX — besides being for the Victoria Cup, is to give Island fans an opportunity to see NASL players in action; and the only people who will profit will be the children.

Seventy-five per cent of the proceeds will go the Pearkes Clinic and 25 per cent to the Lower Island Juvenile Soccer Association. And this type of distribution of funds alone sets the game apart from the usual pre-season exhibition game. All concerned are to be commended.

Rutland's Reputation Rises

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

Where's Rutland?

That was a question on many observers' minds Wednesday at UVic's old gym where the B.C. high school girls' basketball tournament is taking place.

And for the record, Rutland, once a separate township, is part of Kelowna.

What made people inquisitive about Rutland High School Voodoos were their strong efforts in two games Thursday.

In the tournament's opening contest, the Voodoos pulled the upset of the day by taking a 53-52 decision over Eric Hamber Griffins, the top club in the powerful Vancouver and District League.

In their second outing, the Voodoos caused the talented Belmont Tomahawks more than a few worries before bowing 31-27 when Belmont's Sheila Chalmers and Pat Charron scored last-minute baskets on steals.

Voodoos built an 11-6 first-quarter lead against the Tomahawks and looked as if they would run the Belmont club off the court.

But defensive lapses caught up with Rutland and Belmont took a 17-14 half-time lead.

Irene Bodman topped Tomahawks with 10 points while clubmate Louise Nowell added eight. Holly Jackson had 13 points for the Voodoos.

Miss Jackson led Rutland to its win over Eric Hamber with 20 points and teammate Karen Sommerfeld added 12. Judy Bukauskas scored 24 points and Pat Austin 18 for the Griffins.

In other games Wednesday, Shelley Godfrey fired 20 points and sister Lesley added 13 as Victoria High's Tigers downed Argyle, the fourth-ranked Vancouver team, 55-37, after romping to a 49-35 victory over Castelgar Rockettes.

Reynolds, Victoria's other entry in the four-day, 16-team tournament, finished with a strong 51-38 victory over North Delta after dropping a 46-45 verdict to Richmond in their first start.

The 16 teams are divided into four divisions with the top two finishers from each group advancing to the championship round, which starts Friday.

Today's games started at UVic but will switch to the Henderson Park Pavilion for tonight's games at 7:15, 8:30 and 9:45.

Teams return to the UVic gym Friday and Saturday.

An Idea and New Hope

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Using a unique reorganization plan that ties player salaries to revenue, the World Football League says it will rise from its ashes and try again for a piece of the consumer's shrinking dollar.

WFL president Chris Hemmeter, who parlayed a $10,000 loan into a holding company with more than $100 million in assets in Hawaii, has conceived and sold a plan he says will transform the WFL from an unsuccessful league into one which pays its own way.

"Even from the most conservative base, there will be a WFL in 1975," Hemmeter said Wednesday following a meeting attended by 13 prospective franchise owners. He refused to give a flat-out guarantee that the WFL would play this year, but repeatedly said there was no doubt it would.

The prospective franchise holders will meet in Chicago in two weeks, then gather in New York April 12, when Hemmeter said he would announce the teams for this coming season and a 20-game schedule. He said the first games would be played July 26 or Aug. 2.

Each team will be required to place in escrowed bank accounts amounts ranging from $1 million to more than $2 million to ensure they can pay operating expenses and avoid the incredible series of disasters which struck the league and its teams in 1974.

Players will get a piece of the action, although it may be smaller than some want. Hemmeter said most players would be signed to percentage contracts, in many cases giving them one per cent of a team's revenues as salary.

A few players, such as former Miami Dolphins Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield, would continue to be paid much larger salaries irrespective of revenue.

Finally, Hemmeter said the league would settle its outstanding debts which total $5.7 million.

Squeeze Play Is On As Blues Nip Hawks

By The Canadian Press

Chicago Black Hawks and Vancouver Canucks, who have taken turns leading the National Hockey League Smythe Division, suddenly have company.

St. Louis Blues, struggling all season with a lineup that includes largely a rookie defence, today are in a position to challenge for the lead after beating the Hawks 4-3 Wednesday night.

The Blues' victory pulled them to within two points of the Hawks and Canucks who are tied for the lead with 71 points each.

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh Penguins clinched a playoff spot in the Norris Division with a 5-3 victory over Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs also assured themselves of post-season action with a 3-3 tie against Montreal Canadiens.

New York Rangers beat cross-town rival Islanders 5-3, Atlanta Flames whipped Minnesota North Stars 9-4 and Buffalo Sabres beat California Seals 7-2.

Veteran defenceman Barclay Plager was outstanding for the Blues. St. Louis coach Gary Young said Plager "must have blocked 20 shots with his body."

But Plager gave the credit to the recently-hired Young.

"Before, we never had a game plan," said Plager. "We were just told to go out and hit hard. Now we plan our strategy before every game and it has really paid off."

At Toronto, the Leafs gained the tie agaist Montreal when Ron Ellis scored with three seconds remaining.

An icing call forced a faceoff in the Montreal zone with eight seconds left. Leafs had pulled goalie Gord McRae for an extra attacker. Darryl Sittler won the faceoff and defenceman Bob Neely fired a shot at goalie Ken Dryden.

Dryden made the save but Ellis pounced on the rebound and backhanded it over Dryden's arm.

At New York, the Rangers came out hitting and took advantage of a shaky start by Islanders goalie Billy Smith to score goals on three of their first five shots.

Latta Captures Fourth in a Row

Times News Services

Dick Latta of Victoria, representing B.C. at the Canadian Police curling championships in Regina, picked up his fourth straight victory Wednesday with an 11-3 decision over Newfoundland.

Latta, who is still in a third-place tie after three days of competition, defeated the Territories 10-3 in a morning round. Ontario leads the playdown with a 6-0 record while Alberta and Manitoba share second spot at 5-1 and B.C. is deadlocked with Prince Edward Island at 4-2.

Elsewhere, Beverly Bowen of Vancouver kept B.C. in contention at the Canadian schoolgirls' championship in Grand Falls, Nfld., with a pair of wins, a 9-6 sixth-round victory over Ontario and a 13-2 win in the seventh round over Quebec. B.C. now has a 6-1 record while Saskatchewan leads at 7-0.

In the schoolboys' championship in Edmontin, Manitoba and Alberta remained unbeaten after seven rounds while B.C., represented by Dave Johnston of Prince George, is tied with Northern Ontario for second place with 5-2 records.

Johnston lost a narrow 5-3 decision to Alberta in the morning, then rebounded for a 10-9 victory over Prince Edward Island in the night draw.

MOORE RINK REPRESENTS S. ISLAND

A Victoria Curling Club rink skipped by Gordie Moore and including Bill Purdy, Jack Parr and Bert Edmonds will represent south Vancouver Island in the Guy Philip Trophy final.

Moore's foursome will compete against rinks from the North Island, Lower mainland and Fraser Valley in competition to determine the Pacific Coast seniors' champions, starting March 21 at Vancouver Curling Club.

Four Coast finalists also will participate in the B.C. championshp, an eight-rink, round-robin starting March 23 at Victoria Club.

Record Nets Hull Second Billing

By The Canadian Press

Real Cloutier, Quebec Nordiques' 18-year-old rookie forward, realized one of his childhood dreams Wednesday night at the Quebec Coliseum.

"There'd only be one chance in a thousand that I'd be named a star ahead of Bobby Hull," said Cloutier shortly after he was selected the game's No. 1 star ahead of Hull, the veteran left winger of Winnipeg Jets, who set a WHA goal-scoring record in the game.

"It's one of those things I've dreamed about since I was a kid."

Both Cloutier and Hull scored two goals Wednesday night for their respective clubs as the Nordiques widened their Canadian-Division lead to eight points with a 5-3 win over the Jets.

Hull's two goals brought his total to 62 for the season, breaking the previous WHA record of 61 set by Danny Lawson of Philadelphia Blazers in 1972-73, the WHA's first year.

In other games, Baltimore Blades blanked Cleveland Crusaders 2-0 while on the West Coast, Vancouver Blazers defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints 4-2.

S. America Is Viking Destination

University of Victoria's rugby Vikings are going to be looking for some dollars — quite a few of them, in fact.

Vikings have some $7,000 now but they are going to have to dream up a few grand schemes to boost that to the $27,000 they'll need to cover the expenses of their summer tour to Argentina and Uruguay.

A total of 26 players, plus manager Howard Gerwing and treasurer Bill Gordon (who are both paying their own way) will make the trip, which leaves from here on Aug. 8.

Vikings will play Belgrano Athletic Club on Aug. 13, Club Athletic Obres Sanitarias on Aug. 16 and San Isidro on Aug. 19, all in Bueonos Aires.

Then come matches against Uruguayan Rep teams in Montevideo on Aug. 22 and 25 before the Vikings return to Buenos Aires to play a full Argentina Rep squad on Aug. 29.

The university team returns to Victoria on Sept. 1.

DALE NAMED AGAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Ladies' Golf Association announced Wednesday the selection of two international golf teams and executive director Leslie Whamond said the senior group is the youngest ever to represent Canada.

The senior team averages 25 years old and will play in the Commonwealth championships at the Ganton Golf Club, Scarborough, Eng., throughout June.

Canadian seniors are Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver; Dale Shaw of Sidney; Elizabeth Hoffman of Toronto; Sue Conklin of Lachute, Que., and Debbie Savoy of Le Tuque, Que.

Also named are a non-playing captain, Mrs. S. J. Diditch of Ottawa, and two alternates, Barbara Turnbull of Saskatoon and Sue Higgs of London, Ont.

Dale presently is in Colombia to play in the Colgate-Alcan international tournament which was to start today.

The association will also send Mrs. J. W. Mackenzie of Saskatoon as a delegate to the Commonwealth conference on golf held in conjunction with the Scarborough tournament.

A junior team, consisting of members 18 years and under, will play in the junior world championships in San Diego, Calif., in July. Captained by Mrs. E. J. Sheedy of Peterborough, Ont., it includes Stacey West of Ontario and Jackie Davies of Alberta.

New Tournament Chairman Spurned Pro Soccer Offer

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

A Venezuelan-born soccer player who only took up tennis in recent years is the Vancouver Island Lawn Tennis Association's new tournament chairman.

Per Lembcke (he changed his first name to Peter because schoolmates teased him) replaces Dick Bradshaw as the Island's top tournament man.

Born in Caracas of an English mother and a Danish father, Peter Lembcke lived in Columbia for 15 years and turned down an offer to become a professional soccer player before coming to Victoria in September, 1965.

A serious knee injury foiled an attempted soccer comeback here and Peter took up sports car racing with the Victoria Motor Sport Club.

"But that soon became a bit expensive," he says with a grin "and I gave it up (to tennis instead."

That was just three years ago and already, you might say, Lembcke's a fanatic. He's a member of both the Racquet Club of Victoria and the new Island Indoor Tennis centre in Saanich.

Lembcke, a "builder-entrepreneur" who is the father of two small boys, helped run a couple of tournaments last season. He made such a fine job of it that this season he's found himself with the top position.

Used to the warm South American sun, the 29-year-old Lembcke is tanned from a recent holiday in Hawaii and admits he tries not to spend too much of the winter in Canada.

But now he's back and ready to get VILTA's summer tournament program in full swing.

Next on the tourney list is the First Chance event at Courtenay April 12 and 13, then it's the new CCC (Capital City Championship), which replaces the old Festival of Sport tourney, on May 2, 3 and 4.

The Vancouver Island Closed championships will be in Nanaimo May 17, 18 and 19 and the Island Junior Closed, also in Nanaimo, June 7 and 8.

The B.C. Junior Sectionals are set for June 21 to 24; the Victoria City Closed is July 5 to 12; the "Old Crocks" tourney at Cowichan is July 18 to 20; the Junior Vets championship at Cowichan is Aug. 4 to 9; the Pacific Northwest sectionals are at Cowichan Aug. 15 to 17; the North Island Closed is set for Aug. 23 and 24; the Last Chance Tourney is Sept. 13 and 14 and the new Junior-Senior Vets Indoor Open will take place Oct. 11, 12 and 13.

As well, the Second Annual Tennis Tournament, so popular when it was held for the first time last year, will be run during the summer. Entries will be called for soon and the event, which is designed for those who play on public parks courts, will run from May to August.

Probably the most exciting thing about this season's tournament schedule is the fact that, for the first time, all senior events will include separate "B" singles competitions for men and women players.

The "B" singles are designed for those players who otherwise wouldn't compete in tournaments. Already the idea has shown it can work. Jo-Anne Stone is not an experienced tournament player.

PETER LEMBCKE
. . . an 'entrepreneur'

Yet she battled through a large field to the women's "B" singles final in the recent Island Indoor Classic and lost narrowly to Glen Meadows' Ann Graham.

Mrs. Stone got her start in tournament play in last season's Times Public Parks tourney, where she was runner-up in the women's singles.

Barbarians Lead

Oak Bay Barbarians snapped a tie for first place with St. Michael's University School in the East Division of the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League by hammering Mt. Douglas Mountainmen 33-6 Wednesday at Carnarvon Park.

Titans collected their fifth win in nine starts when Dan Hemmingway scored a try with 10 minutes remaining. Kym Clarke kicked a penalty goal for the other Titan points while Ed Murray booted a pair of penalty goals for Spectrum.

St. Michael's, meanwhile, is off for a three-week tour of Britain.

About 40 players, including the junior team, and five staff members will tour Kent, Durham and South Wales. They will play about seven matches and watch at least two international contests.

Nine Clubs In Rowing Regatta

Nine clubs, including the host Victoria City Rowing Club, will compete in a Spring Regatta starting at 11 a.m. Sunday at Elk Lake.

Other clubs entered are UVic, Brentwood College, Shawnigan Lake Boys' School, UBC, Burnaby Lake Training Centre, Pacific Lutheran (Tacoma), University of Washington and Oyster Bay (Seattle).

All 21 events will be held over a 2,000-metre course which ends opposite the boat house near the public launching ramp.

Among the highlights of the regatta is the senior singles sculling event at 1 p.m. when Mike Cullin of the host club, the Canadian champion, faces some tough opposition from Chris Allsopp of Oyster Bay, who was on the U.S. team in the 1974 World championships; George Nadin of the University of Washington, who beat Cullin at the Western Sprints last year, and possibly from his own coach, Lief Godfredsen.

Repeat at Portland Is Forsyth's Aim

Victoria's Terry Forsyth begins defence of his Blitz-Wienhardt open stock car racing championship Sunday in Portland with a 1973 Laguna he bought last fall from Harold Hardesty, the Medford, Ore., driver.

Forsyth, who will be accompanied by mechanic Glen Hewitt and pit crew Pete Jordan, Gerry Hewitt, Ken Emerson, John Biggs and Butch Behn, will be up against Tacoma's Ron Eaton and Doug and Hershel McGriff Jr. of Bridal Veil, Ore., in the 100-lap event. Second race in the series is May 26 with two more later in the season, all at Portland.

Forsyth, who owns the car in partnership with the Hewitts and John Copp, first drove it in last year's Canada 200 but dropped out because it wasn't handling properly. He later drove it to second place in the Portland Championship.

He and his crew spent the winter working on the car with help from co-sponsors Stu Palfrey and Fred Grabas.

Shutout by England

WEMBLEY, England (CP) — England defeated West Germany, 2-0, in international exhibition soccer game on a muddy field at Wembley Stadium Wednesday night.

England led by 1-0 at half-time. The goals were scored by Colin Bell in the 25th minute and Malcolm MacDonald in the 65th minute.

A sellout crowd of 100,000 saw England score its first victory over the Germans since the 1966 World Cup final on this same ground. England won that game, 4-2.

Wednesday's rival captains, Alan Ball of England and Franz Beckenbauer of Germany, were the only survivors of the 1966 game.

With both teams in process of rebuilding after contrasting experiences in the last World Cup, the result was of little significance.

Elsewhere Glasgow Celtic's chances of winning the Scottish Football League championship for the 10th successive season faded Wednesday when they were defeated, 3-2, at Aberdeen.

Celtic now trail their bitter cross-city rivals Rangers, by six points and have played the same number of matches, 27.

Dundee qualified to meet Celtic in the semi-finals of the Scottish Cup by edging Hearts, 3-2, in a quarter-final replay.

Three second-half goals gave Airdrieonians a 3-0 win over Arbroath in another quarter-final replay and earned them a semi-final clash with Motherwell.

Douglas Lashes 'Greedy' Oil Firms

DOUGLAS
. . . hits abuses

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposed national oil company should handle all imports of crude oil to block any chance of private oil companies "ripping off" a government subsidy program, New Democrat energy critic T. C. Douglas said Wednesday.

Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands), lashing out at what he called the greed of the multinationals, said import of high cost foreign oil should be taken out of the hands of the companies.

Referring to reports that oil companies are taking more oil from the Middle East than Venezuela to get higher subsidies, Douglas said government control of the imports would end such abuses.

Under a federal program to subsidize higher cost imported oil used in the eastern provinces, the government pays a compensation of $4.90 a barrel for Venezuelan crude and $6.20 a barrel for Middle East oil.

Even after paying more for Arabian oil ($12.35 a barrel compared with $12 for Venezuelan oil) the companies end up with an extra 95 cents by taking Mideast oil.

Spokesmen for the energy supplies allocation board said they are working on changes in the compensation plan that will end the loophole.

Reports issued by Statistics Canada show that during the last year the companies have switched their sources of supply for the 900,000 barrels imported daily.

They now take 60 per cent from the Middle East and 40 per cent from Venezuela, the exact reverse of supply sources a year ago when 60 per cent came from Venezuela.

"The government tries to help the people and calls on the companies to co-operate, end up ripping them off."

Earlier, when he spoke during the debate, the minister said the proposed company would become involved only in importation of oil if the government felt it could negotiate a better price than the private companies.

Saudi Arabia said earlier this year it might give national oil companies a three-per-cent discount on oil purchases, but it would not extent the discount to the private companies.

Petro Bill Opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government asked for quick passage Wednesday of a bill setting up a national petroleum corporation, but the opposition served notice it will fight the legislation.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald made the comments as he spoke on second reading of the bill establishing Petro Canada, a corporation he wants to look after federal investment in the Syncrude oil sands project.

Ottawa decided last month to invest $300 million in the Syncrude consortium which also includes two provincial governments and three multinational oil companies.

But as debate on the bill opened, Conservative energy critic James Gillies (Toronto Don Valley) indicated it will face a rough passage through the House.

The Conservatives felt the corporation will serve no useful purpose and intend to oppose it "as strenuously os we can," he said.

T. C. Douglas (NDP-Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) said his party supports the measure, although he wished the goverment would go a little further.

He called on Macdonald to give the new corporation power to take over Imperial Oil Ltd., a subsidiary of Exxon Inc. of the U.S.

That would give the proposed federal corporation an interest in all areas of the petroleum business, he told the House.

Earlier, Macdonald said Petro Canada would explore and produce any natural gas or oil it finds. But he said the company will not be involved in refining or marketing the products.

The new corporation, with initial financing of $500 million, will help provide security of supply for both domestic and imported oil, the minister said.

With attractive investment opportunities and a better chance of finding oil in some other countries, Ottawa feared the companies will not spend as much as needed on exploration in the north.

The new corporation would provide additioal exploration money in the north if the companies slackened their efforts, the minister said.

"We look to the private sector to continue to find, develop, transport and deliver the bulk of our fuel energy needs," he said. "The national petroleum company is intended to supplement and stimulate the efforts of the private sector."

Movie Seized

WINNIPEG (CP) — Police said Tuesday they seized a copy of the controversial movie, Deep Throat, that was being shown at a private residence in the city before 11 viewers who had paid a total of $55 to see it.

Acting Staff Insp. Ken Johnston said the film was being shown on videotape, using a television set, and a total of 17 people were at the premises raided by the vice squad Monday night. No charges have been laid.

Tax Refunds Step Closer

OTTAWA (CP) — The senate banking, trade and commerce committee was expected to finish study of the government income tax bill today, clearing the way for final parliamentary approval and the release of thousands of 1974 income tax refunds.

"We did a lot today," committee chairman Salter hayden (L--Ontario) said Wednesday after 5½ hours of detailed study of the bill.

Finance Minister John Turner was scheduled to appear before the committee this morning to answer questions and defend government policy.

Ottawa's proposed resource tax provisions have come under constant attack by members of both sides of the Liberal-dominated upper house.

The Commons passed the bill more than two weeks ago after the majority Liberal government defeated three opposition attempts to delay implementation of the contentious resource provisions.

Danson Backs Patronage

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson suggested Wednesday that there is nothing wrong with his asking Liberal MPs to recommend lawyers in their constituencies who can handle Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. contracts.

Mr. Danson, whose responsibilities include CMHC, was replying to Bob Brisco (PC—Kootenay West), who contended that the minister's earlier replies on the subject are a breach of parliamentary privilege.

Mr. Brisco asked in the Commons Monday whether Mr. Danson wrote to MPs asking for the names of lawyers who are Liberal party supporters.

Mr. Danson's reply then was "in no such terms at all."

But the Toronto Star which obtained a copy of the letter, said that Mr. Danson asked MPs to be quick in recommending lawyers and that he complained "some offices have been taking three or four weeks to provide the names" and are holding up CMHC projects.

Asked to comment, Mr. Danson said outside the House that it is traditional for parties to give work to party supporters and while not all CMHC contracts are handled by Liberal lawyers, "most of them are."

Mr. Brisco's question of privilege was that Mr. Danson had given conflicting replies in and out of the Commons, but it was not approved by Commons Speaker James Jerome.

Mr. Danson, stealing a page from Prime Minister Trudeau, said Wednesday that it is a "strange coincidence" that Ontario's Conservative government hires mostly Conservative lawyers, the British Columbia New Democratic Party government hires mostly NDP supporters and "the best on a national scale is always our Liberals."

Mr. Trudeau, replying to similar questions in the Commons last May, denied that the government's legal work goes exclusively to Liberal lawyers, but he added that "it often happens that the best lawyers are Liberals."

Session for Implementing Foreign Investment Act

(Times Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — A high level meeting to work out details for implementing the second phase of Canada's foreign investment review act will be held here within three weeks.

Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie Wednesday told the Commons the meeting will bring together deputy trade ministers from the provinces and officials of the foreign invesmtent review agency.

He said the officials hope to complete preparatory steps towards implementation of the regulations which will clamp tighter controls over foreign investment in Canada.

Trade ministers from the provinces met with Gillespie last Monday and Tuesday in sessions described by the federal minister as "useful and constructive."

Gillespie said the ministers discussed guidelines for implementation of stage two of the act but asked for more time "to study and understand it."

Under phase two, foreign companies attempting takeovers of Canadian enterprises must prove to the government's satisfaction that the takeover is of substantial benefit to Canada.

The first phase, which has been in effect since last April, makes it mandatory that takeovers of companies with assets of more than $250,000 or sales of more than $3 million a year must be reported to the foreign investment review agency. The agency advises the industry minister who carries the recommendations to cabinet.

Gillespie's comments in the Commons were in response to a question from former consumer and corporate affairs minister Herb Gray on when the second part of the act would be proclaimed.

FLAG ABUSE BILL TARGET

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill that would make wilful destruction of the Canadian flag a criminal offence punishable by a fine or imprisonment or both was given approval by a Commons justice committee Wednesday.

The bill, introduced in the Commins by Leonard Hopkins (L—Renfrew North Nipissing East) originally included provincial flags and foreign flags flown in Canada, but the committee approved amendments to include only the "national flag of Canada."

The bill reads in part: "Every one who wilfully destroys, disfigures, mutilates, defaces, defiles, desecrates or casts contempt upon the national flag of Canada is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction."

Committee Approves Beaver Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill that would officially adopt the beaver as a symbol of Canadian sovereignty was approved by the Commons justice committee Wednesday.

The private member's bill, introduced in the Commons by Sean O'Sullivan (PC—Hamilton-Wentworth), would not, however, preclude the use of the beaver by other countries as a state symbol.

O'Sullivan told the committee that the beaver, unlike the maple leaf, for instance, would not be protected by a Canadian trademark and cited use of the animal as a state symbol by the U.S. state of Oregon.

The bill received committee approval with little substantive debate and now goes back to the Commons for third reading.

'Muzzled' Planner Quits

A member of the Sooke advisory planning commission has resigned because he felt muzzled by other commission members.

Eric Butler quit after regional district representative Ron Dumont scolded him for discussing commission business in public.

Dumont referred to a regional district bylaw stating commission meetings must be in-camera and that members can report only to the district's local planning and zoning committee.

Dumont expressed regret today at the resignation.

"I hadn't been informed it was in confidence," said Butler who was unaware of the commission's terms of reference.

Advisory planning commissions in electoral areas outside Victoria area municipalities all adhere to the "confidence" clause of the bylaw, said Dumont, which effectively stops certain conflicts of interest.

Butler said Dumont took him to task when he spoke to local newspapers and Sooke residents about the comfission's views on the proposed regional plan.

"I was told I wasn't to speak out," he said.

His purpose for sitting on the commission, said Butler, had been to involve the whole community which necessitated getting residents' views on matters.

"More public discussion is needed," he said. "I want to involve people more. I want people to know what's going on."

He said he was opposed to some of the in-camera meetings the commission held.

Job Classes Altered On Ferries

B.C. Ferries will reclassify a job description which discriminated between male and female cleaning staff on ferry runs, Transport Minsiter Bob Strachan said Wednesday.

He made the comment following questioning by Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson who asked the reason for a discrepancy between male and female employees.

Gibson said a female cleaner makes $733 a month and a male cleaner $778.

Strachan said B.C. Ferries is eliminating the two classifications and will opt for a new non-discriminatory schedule of cleaner 1 and cleaner 2.

Cleaner 1 staff perform less onerous duties he said, and hence the difference in salary.

Competition for jobs will be geared so there is a balance of two in each classification to ensure washrooms can be cleaned while still open to the public, he said.

"The situation is not quite normal," said Strachan, and employees have to be distinguished to some extent because cleaning of washrooms are necessary while the ferries are in motion.

He said the B.C. Ferries employees union and Human Rights Commissioner Kathleen Ruff have approved and re-classification has been given top priority.

Defective TV Sets Not in Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian public should not be alarmed by a recall in the U.S. of 4,500 color television sets, a health and welfare department spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman, in the health and protection branch, said that as far as he knows none of the models involved have come into Canada.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Monday that 2,000 Quasar and 2,500 Toshiba sets had defects and were being recalled.

6 SHIPS AT ANCHOR

Six ships are now anchored in the harbor off Royal Roads awaiting cargo as the province-wide strike of longshoremen entered its 13th day today.

A spokesman for King Bros. Ltd., customs brokers for all six ships, said the vessels are all slated for cargo loading in Vancouver but have had to anchor in the Victoria area because Vancouver's English Bay archorage area is full

The six vessels are awaiting grain shipments from the Prairies and will proceed to Vancouver for loading as soon as the strike by 4,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union is over. There are about 120 ILWU members in the Victoria area.

Ogden Point dock in Victoria is affected by the strike, but the King Bros. Ltd. spokesman said so far no ships have arrived that were to have been loaded from Ogden Point.

Other dock operations in the province affected by the strike are: Vancouver, Cowichan Bay, New Westminster, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Chemainus, Crofton, Ladysmith and Harmac.

The ILWU contract with the Maritime Employers' Association expired Dec. 31, 1974. Negotiations broke down at the end of February and the strike was called midnight March 1.

The dispute centres around wages and jurisdiction of container cargo which the longshoremen are now responsible for unloading. The employers' association wants the container cargo removed from the ILWU jurisdiction.

Land Decision Later

CAMPBELL RIVER — Resources Minister Robert Williams said Wednesday it could be several months before a decision is made on the future of the sitika-Schoen area, the last wilderness watershed on the east coast of Vancouver Island.

The last of a series of public hearings on the issue will be held in Nanaimo Friday at the Credit Union Hall at 7 p.m. Other meetings have been held at Campbell River, Port McNeil and Sayward.

Williams disagreed with those who termed the hearings a sham.

"They are not a sham," he said. "This is the first time citizens of the province have had such an opportunity to discuss land use.

"Under the Socred regime the first you would have learned about the disposition of the land would have been through an order-in-council."

RUG RANK CUT

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will abolish civil service "rug ranking" this fall, freeing secretaries to advance on their own merits instead of the fortunes of their bosses, treasury board President Jean Chretien said today.

Chretien told a career planning seminar for 225 women civil servants here that the practice, condemned by women's organizations within the government, will end with the reclassification of about 15,000 civil service secretarial jobs.

PUGET SPILL 'ANY TIME'

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP)—Oil spills as large as several million gallons could occur in Puget Sound at any time and the state is largely unprepared to meet such catastrophies, a top aide to Governor Dan Evans told the legislators Wednesday.

"We simply are not prepared to deal with major oil spills," David W. Stevens told the Senate transportation committee. "Even with every volunteer we could muster, plus all the industrial capability, we could not mount an adequate response."

Dr. William Brewer, head of the state Energy Policy Council, said if the contents of just one compartment of a supertanker spilled into Puget Sound, it would exceed the state's cleanup capability by ten times.

The comments came as the committee heard unanimous support for two plans to impose a barrel tax on crude oil brought into the state by tanker. Oil companies and other opponents will appear at a later hearing.

Stevens said oil imports by tanker will be up to 350,000 barrels a day by 1983, compared with daily deliveries of 75,000 to 90,000 barrels last year. By 1983, probably all Canadian pipeline supplies will be cut off and oil will have to be brought in solely by ship.

The governor's plan is to impose a four-cent tax on each barrel of crude landed in the state. The money would be placed in the coastal protection fund to increase clean-up capabilities, for spill prevention and monitoring of tanker movements.

Growing Fears for Kenya Violence

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Club-swinging riot police chased student demonstrators through a deserted city Wednesday as fears of violence grew following the slaying of opposition leader J. M. Kariuki.

The Kenyan capital was extremely tense with small scattered protest demonstrations taking place after the assassination of the man widely regarded heretofore as a possible successor to aging President Jomo Kenyatta.

Revelation of his violent death early last week at the hands of still unknown assailants came dramatically Tuesday night when two of his wives broke into the parliament building in downtown Nairobi screaming "Kariuki is dead, Kariuki is dead."

The announcement immediately broke up the session and sent 30 deputies and supporters of Kariuki running off to the city morgue to conform the death of the person many Kenyans called "the most popular politician in Kenya."

Tuesday night, Vice President Daniel Arap Noi, who is also home affairs minister, issued a statement saying the assassination was "tragic, wanton and senseless."

"Whoever did this did not wish Kenya a bright future. It is very sad for Kenya and anyone who wants a peaceful Kenya. It is terrible. I don't know where we are heading."

Kariuki's assassination could well mark the beginning of Kenya's long-anticipated bloody secession crisis even before President Kenyatta, who is now in his eighties, has died or even indicated any intention of retiring.

His death is almost certain to spark a movement among his supporters for revenge that could easily plunge Kenya into a vicious cycle of assassinations and tribal killings primarily between the dominating Kikuyu and the Luo, Kenya's second largest ethnic group which has long felt discriminated against.

Many Western diplomats in Nairobi fear that the secession crisis will be far bloodier than the one Ethiopia has just under gone with the deposition of Emperor Haile Selassie, who is about the same age and a close friend of Kenyatta, by the military.

Gas Cost Higher To East

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Eastern Canada consumers will have to pay more for Arctic natural gas because of changes in the delivery point of the Mackenzie Valley pipeline, a lawer for Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. told the Berger inquiry Wednesday.

Lawyer Reg Gibbs of Calgary, questioning witnesses of Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd., which wants to build the 2,600-mile Arctic line, said the original delivery point of the line was Emerson, Man.

Arctic Gas now plans to deliver the natural gas at Caroline, Alta., closer to American consumers, he said.

Gibbs said lengthening the pipeline in Canada for the benefit of Americans meant the Canadian consumer east of Winnipeg would have to pay for it.

Foothills, whom Gibbs represents at the hearings, also wants to build a pipeline in the north but only to move Canadian gas.

Phil Dau, a member of the consulting team that planned the pipeline's engineering and construction plans, also agreed with Gibbs that a possible route change in the way the line enters Canada from Alaska would be dictated by the Federal Power Commission, the U.S. counterpart of the National Energy Board.

The change would cost an additional $500 million and would avoid a crossing of the Arctic wildlife sanctuary in Alaska.

Gibbs sought assurances that Americans would bear the cost of the change, but Dau said that evidence would have to come from other witnesses.

DIARIES SHOW GLADSTONE A MASOCHIST

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister William Gladstone, a pillar of Britain's Victorian society, was a masochist, whose welfare work with prostitutes drove him to whip himself and commit other "strange and humbling acts," the latest volumes of his diaries show.

"Has it been sufficiently considered how far pain may become a ground of enjoyment?" the statesman wrote. "Ho ware satisfaction and even an action delighting in pain may be a true experimental phenomenon of the human mind."

However, Gladstone insisted he never was guilty of "infidelity to the marriage bed."

The third and fourth volumes of the diaries, edited by Dr. Colin Matthew, lecturer at Oxford, will be published today by the Oxford Univereity Press. They put a new perspective on the man lauded as one of Britain's greatest statesmen at a time when the sun never set on the British empire.

When he died in 1898, at age 89, Gladstone entrusted his record of 29,915 dtys—in 41 journals — to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The Gladstone diaries cover the years between 1840 and 1854 when his political fate was in the balance and he was undergoing political and religious traumas.

Matthew said this "put great strain upon him, and this strain manifested itself in his rescue work with prostitutes."

One aspect of this conflict produced a severe sexual crisis. Matthew contends.

Spectators Killed

MOSCOW (AP) — Several people were crushed to death on a crowded stadium staircase Monday night after a CANADA-Soviet hockey game, it was learned Wednesday.

The newspaper Moscow Pravda acknowledged in an unusual news item that several persons had been killed and injured after the game between the midget-class teams at the Palace of Sports in Sokolniki Park.

Auctioneer Almost Gets LaForce

The property described below has been seized for nonpayment of delinquent revenue taxes ... The property will be sold at public auction ... Bids will be opened March 13, 1975 ... Lot No. 1, 1, 1974 Hornet w. LaForce engine ...

By WILLIAM GILDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The above legal notice appeared recently in the Burlington, Vt., Free Press. It went on for almost two columns and included everything down to waste baskets. It was the announcement that the Internal Revenue Service planned to auction off everything in the workshop of Vermont inventor Edward LaForce because he owed more than $42,000 in withholding taxes and penalties.

On a day that brought good news to LaForce on two fronts, though he has yet to sell the modified engine he says can be immensely important to the troubled auto industry, LaForce backers Wednesday secured a loan said to be from two Vermont persons and paid their tax bill, just hours before the auction was to begin.

LaForce also said he was "very pleased" with a staff report released Wednesday by the Senate Commerce Committee on an Environmental Protection Agency test of the LaForce engine last year. The report said the EPR should test the engine again if additional independent tests obtained by LaForce are promising.

The report urged EPA to "adopt a more flexible policy" toward private developers and said that EPA's comparison of the LaForce car with a so-called "economy-tuned" car was misleading.

"Actually, the charges that were made by EPA personnel to the 1974 Hornet to transform it into the 'economy tuned' vehicle were much more than simple calibration changes," the report said. "The changes made by EPA personnel constituted tampering with the vehicle, to the extent that any manufacturer or dealer who made identical changes would have violated the law."

According to the Senate report, EPA made changes to the ignition timing, carburetor and a vacuum-hose arrangement on the EPA-supplied car but "created the erroneous impression that the adjustments were fairly minor." The EPA-supplied car was then compared to the Laforce car, which LaForce said increases gas mileage about 40 per cent because of increased expansion ration on the engine's power stroke and an intake manifold fuel-air system that improves combustion.

The report also said the burden of proof that LaForce has a valid invention still rests with him.

EPA said it was "particularly pleased that the staff found 'no evidence of any conscious effort by EPA officials to deny a fair and objective evaluation'" of the LaForce engine, and stood by its report.

Whether or not the engine lost horsepower to achieve added mileage, an important part of the EPA-LaForce dispute, could not be determined, the Senate report said.

Since the EPA test, LaForce, and his co-inventor and brother, Robert, had had their engine tested twice by independent parties, who said the LaForce engine horsepower is vritually the same as a standard car. The tests were conducted by an independent Vermont engineer, hired by WMAL Television in Washington, and John Bryson, the state of Delaware's top environmental official.

Ironically, the LaForces almost ended up out of business, at least temporarily, because of the Delaware test. Driving the LaForce car to the test in bad weather, a LaForce mechanic barely averted a crack-up on a hilly, upstate New York road when the car ahead of him began skidding on ice. The LaForce car, with its delicate home-made parts, veered and just barely got past the spinning car.

From there, LaForce accepted an invitation to test his engine at General Motors, and took with him to Michigan his own modified 1974 AMC Hornet, a standard 1974 AMC Hornet (both containg LaForce engines) three mechanics, two lawyers, and one of his principal backers. From the somewhat startled expression of one GM official, it appeared to be an entourage the likes of which GM hadn't experienced for a while.

"It's not very often we have somebody who has modified an engine like that with no more problems than he has," said high-ranking GM engineer Craig Marks, in an interview at the GM technical centre. "Many people who come in here have to apologize for their product. It doesn't perform right, it knocks, whatever. He has nothing to apologize for."

Because of his weight and chain smoking, the 330-pound LaForce negotiated the long corridors in the vast GM centre with difficulty, calling it "like walking from Richmond, Vt., to Burlington."

LaForce also displayed a penchant for extremely generous tipping, one of his free-spending practices that dismays investors. It was his habit of not withholding money from employees' salaries that brought the IRS to his door.

Upon returning to Vermont, LaForce said he entered into an agreement with two Minnesota businessmen, who are said to be considering manufacturing and marketing LaForce parts, particularly the manifold portion of his engine system.

"Maybe it's the first time in history that a man ever made a deal while under seizure by the government," remarked LaForce, noting his plant had been locked by IRS.

LaForce is scheduled today to appear again before the Senate Commerce Committee and is expected to talk about his engine and his belief that improved gas mileage standards required in various bills before Congress can be met.

A Simple Manoeuvre To Save the Lives Of Choking Victims

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Heimlich Hug isn't a dance step or a wrestling hold. It's a simple "manoeuvre" which could save your life if you're choking.

John Doe is out to dinner with friends at his favorite restaurant. He's had a few drinks and then his steak arrives. He's hungry and maybe he's also a glutton. The mouthful of steak is too big and he doesn't chew it properly.

Suddenly he leaps to his feet, clutching his throat. He tries to talk but he can't make a sound. He collapses, starts to turn blue. In a few moments he's going to be dead.

Most people would think he's had a heart attack so such cases are sometimes labelled "cafe coronaries." But John Doe is strangling to death on his steak.

And he can't make a sound to tell anyone in the brief time he remains conscious. (And that's the tipoff. A heart attack victim will still be able to talk, says Maccagno.)

What to do? The Heimlich Hug.

—If the victim is standing or sitting, stand behind him and wrap your arms around his waist.

—Repeat several times if necessary.

What happens is the air trapped in the lungs by the obstruction in the throat is compressed, providing a driving force against the obstruction. It usually drives it out.

—If the victim has collapsed, turn him on his back and kneel astride his hips.

—Press forcefully with the heel of your hand into the victim's abdomen with a quick upward thrust.

—Repeat several times if necessary.

The Heimlich manoeuvre or "hug" was developed by Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, director of surgery and head of the esophagus centre at the Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati.

In the current issue of Emergency Medicine Heimlich notes there are 3,900 totally avoidable deaths in the U.S. of this sort annually, meaning there are probably 400 or so a year in Canada.

Since word of the technique or manoeuvre has received publicity, a stream of reports have come in of lives saved by it, including resuscitation of drowning victims.

Most of the reported rescues were handled by laymen. At least 35 lives were saved with it last year, a medical convention in Montreal in December was told.

Maccagno said the manoeuvre hasn't been used in the emergency department at Royal Jubilee Hospital. Action to help choking victims is needed long before they can reach a hospital.

He has some reservations about the technique, pointing out the possibility of stomach rupture or damage to liver or spleen if too much pressure is applied.

But he also sees the Heimlich Hug being taught routinely in future as a valuable rescue technique.

Some Thoughts at 60 When Nothing Happened

Somewhere in the back of my mind, where I keep a disorganized file index of future column subjects, I'd planned a little piece on reaching a 60th birthday, but it really doesn't look very good so goodbye.

What I mean is that, apart from the intense heat of the candles, getting to be 60 didn't affect me as much as I'd anticipated. Oh, I cried a lot, sure. But there really wasn't all the soul-searching that I'd expected. It just kind of surprised me that I'd made it. "Me? Sixty?" I babbled when the cake flared up. "You might as well try for sixty-one," said my wife, ever the philosopher. That was all there was to it.

About the only thing that was new, really, was that I began to think a little bit about retirement. It just came to me in a flash that in exactly five years I can walk into the managing editor's office and say, "Shove it, Gord."

I can't think why I would, mind you, and nobody ever does. Guys who have spent a lifetime planning that last delicious moment dissolve into globs of sentimentality when the moment arrives and suddenly discover that they hate to be going. We had a fellow here named Pete Sallaway who, for the last full year of his service, used to mark a desk calendar, chuckling evilly as he lopped off each day. When the final one came they had to practically drag him away.

Once, when I was in my late thirties or early forties, I wrote an essay on retirement that was widely reprinted, even, I'm now ashamed to say, in some of the old-age-pension journals.

I thought I had the answer to retirement, you see. I thought that a sort of controlled senility, or second childhood, would be the answer. I wrote about lying on a beach, idly throwing pebbles into the water, giggling away the golden years.

The trouble with this, I now see all too clearly, is that the years do not bring with them the slightest lessening in ambition or any slackening in the desire to do something productive. If anything, they merely increase them. All my own dreams of sloth have gone with the wind of 60 years. Call me a fool, if you will, but I've bigger, wilder plans now than I had at 20. Yes, call me a fool.

I was disappointed, too, to find that I'd no fixed, cast-iron, self-protective philosophy when I'd reached this plateau. Guys of 60 are supposed to suddenly mouth maxims like Dr. Chase's Almanac or, at least, arrive at some sort of inner understanding of themselves, often mouthed to captive grandchildren on their bony old knees. Not me. Life has never seemed more mystifying than it does right now. Far from accepting any home truths I fruitlessly question everything.

Yet I think that age does bring a sense of realism to most of us and that this passes as philosophy and may even be a philosophy. The fatalistic shrug is now the best gesture I know to accept life's disasters. When the joys come along that's a little extra dividend. At 60 a man learns, if nothing else, that the disasters and the joys usually balance out.

There's some compensation, too, in knowing that you probably never had such control over your mind. Physically, you may be past your prime. Your daughter is going to beat you at tennis, 6-0, 6-0. But almost anybody at 60 has a head full of experience, savvy, judgment and dirty tricks that make up a kind of encyclopedia of response to any given situation. A man at 60 knows when to play it straight or when to cheat like a gentleman. If he doesn't he's wasted all those years.

If I'd expected some magic religious conversion on such an arbitrary date I was doomed, as the saying goes, to failure.

It's often said that the non-believer simply has to reach the age when he starts seriously to think about the long claw of the sea-puss to convert him and, of course, there are older people who do go into the church in the hope of some last-minute salvation, or, at least, to hedge their bet on the hereafter. Now that nearly all my close friends are, themselves, over 60 I find that this is rare.

Most over-60s, I find, have a hell of a time believing there's one God. The reason, I suppose, is that it's so hard to believe in a Supreme Being who'll wait around until a man's or a woman's defences are down, then Pow! Wham! Ker-Pow! cut them down with the most crippling and degrading diseases known to man.

I don't say that was my own reason, mind you, for failing to see a sudden light, but, as I've admitted, not much of anything seems to have happened at an age that I'd always though might be momentous. Heigh ho.

Intern Strike No Threat To Patient Care—Hospitals

Twenty-one Victoria interns have voted in favor of a strike but spokesmen at the city's two general hospitals said today patient care would not be seriously affected if it happens.

Interns and resident doctors in Greater Vancouver and the two local teaching hospitals have voted 94 per cent for strike action to start Monday in a contract dispute.

There are 13 interns at Royal Jubilee Hospital and eight at Victoria General but the major impact would be felt at Vancouver General, where there are 150 to 200 interns and residents.

Dr. Craig Beattie, president of the Professional Association of Residents and Interns of B.C., representing more than 270 doctors, said in Vancouver Wednesday the vote to withdraw services was in support of a request for arbitration.

The doctors have been negotiating with the B.C. Health Association for the past five months but have reached an impasse, Dr. Beattie said. The association's first contract expired at the end of last year.

A spokesman in the labor relations section of the BCHA said today the main issue is money. Junior residents now receive $8,000 a year.

At Jubilee Hospital, Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director, said he wants to assure patients and public that an interns' strike will not have any serious affect on patient care. That view was echoed by Jim Fair, executive director at Victoria General.

SPEC Wins Campaign Over Ganges Sewage

The provincial Pollution Control Board has upheld an appeal by environmentalists and turned down a plan by the Capital Regional Board to discharge sewage into Ganges Harbor on Salt Spring Island.

In a letter to the regional board Wednesday PCB chairman Ben Marr said the region had failed to show the proposed system would not cause pollution in the harbor.

The plan had been opposed by the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control in Vancouver after the regional board last year had been granted a permit.

The regional board had proposed a sewage collection system to serve the built-up portion of Ganges, a total of about 240 property owners, secondary treatment of the sewage and an outfall of about 1,000 feet to discharge the treated sewage into Ganges Harbor. Ganges currently has only individual septic tank systems.

SPEC had opposed the plan, arguing the harbor waters were inadequate to disperse the effluent without hazard and pointing out there were recreation beaches within 2,500 feet of the proposed outfall. It suggested a longer outfall might serve.

The pollution control board's ruling today said in part:

" . . . while the board is on record as recognizing discharge of secondary treated sewage into marine waters as a generally satisfactory method of municipal waste treatment, it is the opinion of the board that in this particular case of discharge into confined and shallow waters, (the regional board) has failed to show that the works proposed will not cause pollution in the Ganges Harbor."

George Heinekey, director for Salt Spring Island on the regional board, said today he was startled by the decision, anticipating there might have been more stringent conditions imposed but not that the proposal would get outright rejection.

Heinekey said one alternative would be to tell the province: "You turned it down. You put in the system."

'Suspicious' Fire

A fire in a locked locker room in the Stanley Apartments, 1350 Stanley, Wednesday night has prompted an investigation by Victoria fire department officials.

Deputy chief R. J. Coates said the fire, wich originated in a pile of boxes in a walkway of the locker room, was "highly suspicious" but would not say outright if it was arson.

Firemen, called to the scene at 10:10 p.m. when a heat detection device in the locker room triggered the alarm, had little trouble containing the blaze.

Coates said three lockers and contents were destroyed. He placed damage at roughly $3,500.

GREAT GLOVE MYSTERY of Dallas Road intrigues Mrs. Monty Porter, as she pauses by this handy litter bin. Can it be the victim of some ghastly crime? Some connection with the accumulating garbage problem and the CUPE strike-lockout? Was a dawn duellist "disarmed" in the very act of throwing down the gauntlet—with his hand still inside it? For the strong of heart, the answer is in the can. (Bill Halkett photo)

Fast Trial Requested

Kenneth George Katrensky, 27, of 308 Edward, pleaded not guilty in Victoria provincial court Wednesday afternoon to robbing the Bank of Nova Scotia at Douglas and Courtney of $1,484 only three hours before.

Ostler remanded the case to Friday morning and told Katrensky he could seek advice from Legal Aid while held in jail.

City police said a young man approached teller Donna Lee Budd, 20, and held one hand in a jacket pocket as if to simulate a gun. He gave her a paper bag on which was written in black letters, Empty Your Till.

After he received the money, the man slowly walked out of the bank. The teller told manageress Jeannine Robson there had been a holdup and pointed to a departing man.

While the manageress phoned the police, Miss Budd started out the main door after the man.

Recognizing a frequent customer of the bank, she asked him to help follow the man who was heading north along Douglas from Courtney.

Constables Larry Pickering and Robert Blackie arrived in a police car. Miss Budd pointed to the suspect and he was arrested without resistance.

The customer who joined the pursuit walked away without leaving his name.

Credit Unions Buck Rebate Shops

Victoria credit unions are making loans to keep people out of the hands of tax rebate shops, says Vincent Devries, manager of the Provincial Government Employees Credit Union.

"We have made a number of loans to people expecting rebates — and we will continue doing this," he said.

"I am concerned that so many people seem to be going to these tax rebate shops first, feeling they will be turned down by a credit union or a bank.

"They should try their credit union or bank first if they are expecting a rebate. They will save a great deal of money."

The local credit unions are responding to a plea from A. R. Glen, president of B.C. Central Credit Union, that funds be made available as loans against tax rebates.

Glen had said tax rebate shops were charging "outrageous" fees, as much as 50 per cent of the rebate.

Devries said the Provincial Government Employees Credit Union does not ask members to sign over the rebate to them, it simply makes a short-term loan and trusts the member to pay when the rebate comes.

"There is too much administration work involved in signing over tax rebates. We find it is easier and it works out better to just trust people."

The rate of loan approvals at credit unions is high, Devries said.

Provincial Government Credit Union approval rate is higher than most because most of the members are working. Unemployed members are the only marginal cases.

The Victoria credit union handles between 150 and 170 loan applications per month and rejects only one or two, Devries said.

Many of the loans being approved are against tax rebates and others are against retroactive pay.

Tax rebate cheques will be in the mail as soon as amendments to the Income Tax Act, approved by the House of Commons, are dealt with in the Senate. Final approval is expected momentarily.

B.C. Central Credit Union has urged the federal government to outlaw the practice of assigning tax rebates to other people, thereby putting the refund shops out of business.

$50,000 BAIL

Bail has been set at $50,000 for a Victoria man charged with murder in connection with the death of his wife March 1.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton set the bail in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday for Edward Robert Nicholet, 21, of 1345 Pandora.

Bully Boyfriend

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and work as a secretary in a large office. My boyfriend works there, too. The other evening, we attended the wake of a fellow employee.

First off, my boyfriend became angry when I held on to his hand while we both walked up to the casket. Then a young kid who works at the office came in and kissed me on the lips. I suppose I could have moved my head and given this kid my cheek instead, but it all happened so fast.

Then someone came up to talk to me and I spoke to him before I introduced my boyfriend, which my boyfriend said was very bad manners. After that happened he said: "Let's go," so we did. As soon as we got in his car he said he was ashamed of my behavior, then he punched me in the mouth.

Please tell me how to deal with this hot-headed boyfriend. After he hit me, he didn't even say he was sorry. Punched

DEAR PUNCHED: If you continue to go with this hot-headed boyfriend, you are begging for trouble. If you're wise, you'll dump this bully — unless you enjoy getting punched in the mouth.

DEAR ABBY: I am a Protestant who has been married to a Catholic for six months. It seems that my husband considers sex (normal sex, that is) a mortal sin.

He goes to confession once a week and tells the priest everything that happens in our bedroom, and I do mean EVERYTHING!

He tells me that the priest says that I am a source of sin to him!

All this is affecting our marriage. I feel that there are three of us in bed every night — my husband, myself and the parish priest. I am beginning to avoid my husband in all physical contacts as I do not wish to be considered a source of sin to anyone. I am a very decent person.

Before any children are conceived, do you think I should continue in this marriage?—Puzzled

DEAR PUZZLED: You are wise to wonder. Marital relations are not considered "sinful" by the Catholic church. The parish priest surely knows this. Insist that your husband discuss this with the bishop. If your husband refuses, he needs to see a doctor — and so does the parish priest. And you should see a lawyer!

DEAR ABBY: May I please use your column to say something I've been wanting to say for years?

Dear People:

Leave me alone. I'm handicapped, and it shows. Don't ask me: "What happened to your legs? Don't ask me: "What happened to your arms?" Don't ask me: "What happened to your face?" Don't ask me anything!

And I mean YOU. Don't think: "She doesn't mean me. I'm asking only because I'm concerned."

No, you're not. You're just being nosy. You're an insensitive clod if you question me after reading this. And I'm telling you you're a clod the next time you bother me.

Just leave me alone. Leave us all alone! The next time you see a handicapped person, just keep your mouth shut!

Thank you for printing this, Abby. I hope this stops some strangers from harrassing us. Please, no name or location. Sign me . . . Had It With Clods.

DEAR HAD IT: Wow! That's tellin' 'em!

Pet Owners Putting on the Dog, Cat

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A Samoyed dog sheds about 1½ pounds of fur a year. That's enough for a full-sized sweater with matching cap.

"There's someting esthetically pleasing about wearing something made from your own dog's hair," says doghair spinner Bob Jones, who fashions garments out of sheddings from St. Bernards, Pomeranians and Collies.

Dog hair, these days, is being carded, spun, hot-washed, shocked and dried, providing knitting yarn for sweaters, scarves, gloves and various human garments usually made from synthetic materials or conventional wool.

The gathering process is harmless. Strands are collected from the various canines during the natural shedding process, or combed out and saved over a long period until enough is gathered for a project.

Wilna Coulter and Mrs. Harvey Roe make their dog hair goods from Samoyeds which are known for their strength and thick white coat.

Mrs. Coulter boards Samoyeds, so they have access to the fallout from 23 of the animals.

Technically, garments could be made from the hair of any animal.

If you own a Chihuahua, for example, you'd just have to be patient. In a couple of years, you could gather enough strands for, say, half an earmuff.

Several entrepreneurs in San Francisco are making garments from all breeds of dogs and cats specifically for their owners.

He warns that before people begin following the family pet around the house, or cleaning the vacuum bag for strands it should be understood that the process takes time and patience.

Pamphlets Mislead On Birth Control

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ottawa planned parenthood organization has found a large measure of misinformation in birth control literature being widely distributed in Canada.

Planned Parenthood Ottawa Inc. has reviewed 18 birth control pamphlets and booklets and found four of them so misleading it has stopped distributing them.

Another eight are being distributed only with changes eliminating ambiguous or misleading statements.

Of the 18, only six were given an unconditional clean bill of health.

Mary Mills, executive director of the agency, said a circular pointing out deficiencies of the literature has been sent to all family planning agencies in Canada and has been well received.

"There are good things in every booklet," Mrs. Mills said in an interview. "But our concern is that the public often has only one booklet and may not have access to any other information."

In such cases, she says, any misleading information could lead a couple to choose an ineffective method of birth control or to make improper and ineffective use of an otherwise satisfactory method.

Faults found in one or more of the publications the Ottawa group judged inadequate included:

—Failure to promote use of contraceptive foams, jellies and creams in combination with condoms, the diaphragm or the intrauterine device.

—Failure to promote the condom, an "extremely effective" method when used correctly and one that is available without seeing a doctor and is therefore suitable for teen-agers.

Mrs. Mills said about 50 more birth control publications remain to be evaluated.

The pamphlets withdrawn from circulation by Planned Parenthood Ottawa are: Birth Control—Facts for Teen-agers; a pamphlet prepared by the pharmaceutical company Wyeth Ltd. and entitled simply Birth Control; What Every man Should Know About Birth Control; and The Children You Want When You Want Them.

The objection to the Wyeth pamphlet was mainly based on its inclusion of statistics, which Mrs. Mills says cannot be adequately interpreted by the layman and therefore can confuse and mislead.

School Yearn? Think Twice

JANESVILLE, Wis. (AP) — Thinking of going back to school after a few years away from the ivy-covered halls?

Think twice, says a University of Wisconsin counsellor who specializes in the problems of adults who want to go back to college.

Carla Heimerl, who conducts seminars for adult would-be students, returned to school in 1967 after 16 years as a full-time housewife and mother of five and found that going back may be fashionable but it isn't easy.

"It is rather common for the returning adult not to know what he wants to do. Picking a major may seem difficult."

However, Mrs. Heimerl said an even bigger hurdle is the uncertainty and out-of-place feeling of returning adults when they suddenly find themselves in a youth-dominated environment that scarcely resembles college as they remember it.

"The fear of failure may be theatening," she said. "For years the returning adult students have been in another role. They have been on the line at General Motors or taking care of home and family.

Sometimes they may feel uneasy when asked why they are coming back. Perhaps they are afraid of making a commitment, not knowing if they can compete, or afraid of failing, losing face."

Mrs. Heimerl urged adults thinking about going back to school to set attainable goals for themselves before they set foot on campus.

There can also be problems with the reaction of children when Mom or Dad goes back to school, she said. But most families can work things out by talking together about their school work and perhaps even helping one another with homework.

She said friends sometimes resent the adult who returns to school and insist on manufacturing their own reasons for the return.

"They say: 'Aren't you satisfied at home? Aren't you and your husband getting along?' Even if it is only for enrichment, older students should feel free to go back to school."

After all, the initial problems and frustrations of returning to school are worth it, Mrs. Heimerl maintained. "once you're over the hurdle of the adjustments and conflicts, there is such joy and excitement in going back."

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

Every homemaker cherishes recipes which are quick to prepare, nutritious, attractive and easy on the budget.

The 48-page bilingual booklet "Fish 'n Seafood Salads" ("Salades de poisson et de fruits de mer") offers more than two dozen such recipes, many of which you will want to try.

Among the tossed salads, the Rainbow Salad Bowl, with halibut, salmon and shrimp as main ingredients, is a stand out.

An unusual combination salad is Scallop Salad. Be venturesome and try it. Your family and friends will thank you with aahhs and oohhs! The booklet also contains a choice of mixed salads. These are great when you entertain a crowd.

Did you know that fish and fruit complement each other? For instance, for a change why not try a Tuna Waldorf Salad. Instead of the apples, you can use green grapes. The walnuts can be substituted with toasted almonds.

An especially festive dish for special occasions is Lobster Pineapple Salad. It should be served in pineapple shells. There is also an impressive array of appetizing moulded salads, such as Moulded Lobster Newburg and Salmon in Lime-Cucumber Ring.

If your pantry shelf is well stocked, you can always fix a three-fish mousse in which canned shrimp, lobster and tuna are combined. The booklet also contains recipes for tangy salad dressings, including one for a low calorie tomato dressing.

Drug Cuts Heart Injury

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A drug that scientists once feared would harm heart attack victims appears instead to reduce the extent of heart attack damage, offering new hope for treatment of future victims of the number one killer in the U.S.

Dr. Stephen Epstein, of the National Heart and Lung Institute, reports that nitroglycerin has been used experimentally in 10 heart attack patients and all have shown reduction in the degree of heart muscle injury, a key factor affecting survival.

The drug also was found in a series of tests on dogs to make the heart less susceptible to dangerous heart rhythm disturbances, which sometimes are a lethal consequences of heart attacks.

"This is still experimental and much work has to be done in defining the group of patients who will benefit," Epstein said. "We will also have to determine whether there are patients who will experience deleterious effects.

"Nonetheless, the initial results are extremely encouraging and we believe in the future there will be a very important role in the use of nitroglycerin in the treatment of heart attack victims."

Nitroglycerine has been used for more than a century to relieve the chest pain of angina pectoris, a condition caused when the heart receives an insufficient supply of blood because of partially narrowed arteries resulting from atherosclerosis.

Debate for Early Political Exposure

elizabeth forbes

Not long ago I asked Susan Hutchinson, third year University of Victoria student and British Columbia Liberal Party youth caucus chairperson, if she thought political science courses should be included in school curriculums below university level. Her answer was a decided affirmative.

Now I have nearly 200 more arguments in favor of such courses at an earlier school age — discovered last Saturday when I was a judge at the Hammarskjold Cup championship debates, held in St. Michaels University School.

These debates, sponsored by the Debate and Speech Association of British Columbia, were open to all private and public secondary schools in the province. Registered for the event were 23 junior secondary and 18 senior secondary teams, with almost 200 students.

The senior topic was "resolved that the United Nations accept as members representatives of any group aspiring to nationhood."

Subject of junior debates was "resolved that the United Nations should only aid underdeveloped countries that enforce family planning."

Standard rules for all formats of debate in British Columbia were used.

Under the heading of team obligations, for instance, it was noted that where possible to do so the affirmative must present a plan for revising the status quo and be prepared to deal with negative attacks on the plan's feasibility.

On the other hand, the negative could offer any counter plan but must show that counter plan to be significantly different and demonstrably more desirable than the affirmative proposal.

Points were given for introduction, content, delivery, rebuttal and conclusion.

Penalties were also set out, for using sarcasm and abuse, for reading notes, for adding more than one sentence after the sentence in which "time" was signalled, for being drastically under the allotted time and for any interruptions during the speeches.

As a judge, I was a complete novice. Nevertheless, it was soon evident to me that these young people knew their subjects inside-out, had well-documented arguments, for or against, and that without exception, they were not afraid to stand up and speak out.

Also as the day went on, I was more and more convinced that before my eyes, was a host of living arguments in favor of starting political science courses, well below university level.

There is no doubt some of those girls and boys will eventually turn their eyes toward public service at one or another level.

Should it not, therefore, be better to introduce them to the subject now, so they will have some knowledge when they do reach university and not be discovering its fascination for the first time?

This year's championship debates drew to Victoria young students from as far away as Prince George, Williams Lake and the north Okanagan.

However, many schools throughout the province were not represented.

Both David Bennett and Winnifred Scott, president and secretary-treasurer respectively of the sponsoring debate and speech association, expressed hope that the championships program has developed now to a point where it could attract sponsorship and funding from interested organizations and companies or be eligible for help through the province's Cultural Fund.

If funding of that kind was available, the association could then be sent out to schools in all areas of the province, a team that would present exhibition debates, give advice and spark interest in the championships.

Already, in Alberta, an experienced debating team, sponsored by several organizations and companies, is visiting the schools. Funds are also available for a part-time administrator who is in charge of competitions.

Receipts for the championships program here, last Saturday, totalled a mere $1,756.25. Of that sum, $1,038 came from registration fees and $656 in a small grant from the B.C. government.

Voluntary help in planning, organizing and monitoring the debates was given by teachers and students of private and public schools in this area. Young people from out-of-town were all billeted in private homes.

An effort that gives young people a chance not only to develop talents in public speaking and intelligent debate but to test their expertise against winning students in other provinces, at regional and national levels.

These are the young people, let me remind you, who soon will be adult citizens of British Columbia.

Surely nothing could be more satisfying or more rewarding than to give assistance to such girls and boys through a program that offers them an opportunity to assume adult responsibilities in the not-so-distant future, well trained in presenting their opinions and also well informed.

Nutritionist Backs Processed Foods

VANCOUVER (CP) — Many processed foods are more nutritional than their natural ingredients, a British nutrition specialist says.

"For example, niacin in cereals is not biologically available until the food has been heat-treated, and legumes such as soya bean show an improvement in protein quality after processing," Dr. A. E. Bender said at a public lecture at the University of British Columbia.

The University of London nutrition professor said the common tomato in its natural state contains 49 chemicals ingredients in minute quantities.

"But if this list was introduced into a processed food you'd be deafened by the public outcry."

More emotion is generated around food additives and preservatives than any other "and you get two extremes, those who say manufacturers are poisoning us, and manufacturers who say the additives are absolutely safe."

"Neither one is absolutely true. The problem arises when each processor believes that his food plays so small a part in the diet of the community that nutrition is ignored, yet our diets are largely composed of small amounts of each of a large number of processed foods."

He said sulphur dioxide is used in the British sausage as a preservative but it destroys thiamin.

"This is generally considered to be a price worth paying for the protection from food-borne infection."

But he questioned the destruction of thiamin in peeled and chipped potatoes by sulphur dioxide, which is used to prevent the potatoes from turning dark.

"We cannot prove conclusively that added chemicals are harmless since that is trying to prove a negative; we can only achieve a high degree of certainty," Dr. Bender said in an interview.

Victorian Royal Matron

A Victoria woman has been crowned grand royal matron of B.C's branch of the Order of the Amaranth at a provincial conference in Vancouver.

Georgia McNaught of 975 Balmoral, will now oversee the activities of the order throughout the province in the coming year.

The conference was a yearly one for the Grant Court of B.C. and was attended by represntatives from throughout Canada, Alaska and western states of the U.S.

The Amaranth is a Masonic order with about 200 members in Victoria, some of whose activities include fund-raising. Cheques were presnted at the conference to two separate organizations — th Heart Foundation and Cystic Fibrosis Foundation each received $800.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN
Concern is the hallmark of the Unitarian. Concern for the total environment, for the whole of society, for the individuals whose lives touch our own. As a religion, we're better at questions than answers — but we never cease to search for the answers. We find that a fellowship or church of kindred minds and spirits adds much to our appreciation of the joy of living. We tend to talk a lot, worry a lot, laugh a lot. We'd like you to add your voice to our talks. You are our concern. We're waiting to welcome you at the nearest Unitarian church or fellowship.

TORONTO, March 13th — It isn't easy to wear a smile when your feet hurt! And since many people do have some type of foot problem, I am happy to suggest DR. SCHOLL'S KUROTEX . . . the easy, quick way to foot comfort. Kurotex is a cushioning adhesive foot plaster of flesh-coloured moleskin, which is water repellent and self-adhering. For quick relief of pressure on corns, callouses, bunions, tender spots, etc. caused by shoe friction, you simply cut Kurotex to the desired size and shape and apply. Dr. Scholl's Kurotex . . . at better stores everywhere. Try it — and keep smiling!

SOON WE'LL BE TAKING JAUNTS TO THE COUNTRY . . . opening our summer cottages . . . participating in many outdoor sports. To enjoy every minute of it, I plan to keep DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY on hand. As you know, changes in food and water, excitement . . . even motion sickness from travel . . . often cause sudden attacks of diarrhea. I've found pleasant-tasting Dr. Fowler's works quickly to relieve the nausea and cramps of diarrhea. Soothing, settling for both adults and children, Dr. Fowler's Extract is a non-constipating, restorative formula based on roots and herbs. Dr. Fowler's Extract . . . sold in Canada for over 100 years . . . should be in every home.

YOU RARELY GO INTO A GATHERING where you don't hear someone complain of a nagging back-ache. Until you've experienced this problem, you can't imagine how irritable it can make you feel. Fortunately, there is a product that has helped millions of people over the years . . . DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. The cause of back-ache and that tired feeling is quite often due to urinary irritation. Dodd's Kidney Pills contain ingredients that bring effective relief by gently stimulating the kidneys to help relieve back-ache and that worn out feeling. Try Dodd's Kidney Pills — available at all drug counters.

Full House For Wonder

MONTREAL (CP)—As the lights slowly came up, a small figure emerged on stage, dancing, jumping and squealing with excitement. Stevie Wonder, once described as "the most admired musician of his generation," was back in town and raring to go.

With more than 18,000 people packed into the Forum for his sellout concert Wednesday night, this phenomenal 24-year-old blind singer, songwriter and multi-instrumentalist, fired the crowd almost to a frenzy within the first few bars of the opening song, Simon Says, one of his many hits.

Sporting a dazzling blue velvet vest, Stevie sailed through three hours of music with the same unending energy and enthusiasm he showed when he was last in Montreal three years ago, as an opening act to the Rolling Stones.

Now a star in his own right, virtually every song he sings in concert is a favorite. At times alone at the piano, shrouded by a solitary spotlight, at others surrounded by electronic keyboards and backed by his high-energy band, Wonderlove, Stevie mixed up the moods to perform selections from the ground he has covered during his 13-year career.

'HARBORGATE' NO JOKE

OTTAWA — Liberal cabinet ministers were not amused when a Tory MP compared the dredging contract scandal in the Commons Wednesday to the Watergate affair in the United States.

But it obviously amused a distinguished American visitor in the government spectators' gallerz.

John Reynolds (PC — Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) said he would not ask questions on the extent of the investigations in B.C. because "I am sure in the long run the people of Canada will get the answers to this sorry mess as the people of the United States did when they had the Watergate investigation."

As Liberal cabinet minister tary William Simon, who is in Ottawa to confer with Finance Minister John Turner, leaned over, grinning from ear to ear, and shouted down to Reynolds.

VANCOUVER—Premier Dave Barrett says latent racism has always existed in British Columbia.

He told about 1,000 University of British Columbia students to "search your own bias" to help eradiacate latent racism.

"There were East Indian riots, there were riots against the Chinese and what we did to the Japanese during the Second World War. We're talking about a social history, an emotional history of this province."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal we have another statistic in support of the contention that more games are lost at trick one than at any other of the 12 remaining tricks. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

♦ Q J 10 2
♣ A 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening Lead: Three of ♣.

The board's nine of clubs was put up on the opening lead. East covered with the queen, and South won the trick with his ace. South next led three rounds of trumps, landing up in his own hand. He then led the diamond queen, and finessed against West's hoped-for king. East won the trick, and led a club to West's king. West now shifted to a spade, and East won two tricks with his ace and queen, thus handing declarer a one-trick set.

As South should have viewed the set-up, if West possessed the diamond king, then by repeated finesses declarer would bring home the entire diamond suit without loss of a trick. But if East had that key card, he would win a trick with it, since declarer had every intention of taking the diamond finesse.

From declarer's point of view, he should have recognized that the danger to his contract lay in West's procurement of the lead, to play a spade through dummy's king. If this could be prevented, then declarer, after establishing the board's diamond suit, could get rid of one of his two losing spades on dummy's fifth diamond. Hence declarer's play should have been directed towards keeping West out of the lead.

Declarer could have accomplished this objective by allowing East's queen of clubs to have captured the opening lead. Assuming that East then returned a club (no other return could have altered the outcome), South would have captured the second club lead with his ace.

After trumps were drawn next, declarer would take the diamond finesse, as he actually did, losing the trick to East's king. No matter what East played back, he could not get West into the lead for a spade play. All declarer would lose from here in would be one spade trick, since one of his spades would be discarded on the board's fifth diamond. But, as has been demonstrated, South played too hurriedly to the first trick.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Friday, March 14

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What seemed to be going your way seeks a detour. Cycle remains high and you'll overcome obstacles. However, you need more awareness of details. Someone is throwing a curve under the guise of a fast ball. Don't be caught off balance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hold off on final decisions, commitments. Changes are in the air — keep yourself free enough to jump for brass ring. Member of opposite sex is in picture. What happens behind the scenes is more important now than what's up front.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends are involved, complicated in their own situations. Know it and pull back the reins. Slow pace. Get together with family. Lovers' quarrel should not be blown out of proportion. Money pinch is temporary.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message for valid hint. What seems to be unreasonable pressure soon will be lifted. You're going to be able to pick and choose. Pisces, Virgo individuals will play significant roles. Challenge is healthy—you'll meet it and benefit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You could be reaching too far, too soon. Know it and keep alternatives at hand. Otherwise, fall could be embarrassing. What seems noble on surface could be ridiculous once exposed to full view. Be aware and base actions accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish project. Complete what you begin — leave no loose ends. You are offered financial deals. Key now is to refuse to send "good" money chasing after disaster. You'll understand! Aries, Libra are likely to be in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid unnecessary risks. That's generally superfluous advice. But now you may be tempted to "prove something." Key is to aim toward conciliation, mature approach, settlement of differences. Give and take — that is what occurs. It is no black and white or all or nothing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hunch pays dividends. Know it and heed inner feelings. You sense what is happening out of view. What is faraway is not necessarily advantageous. Know it and look in your own back yard. There could be acres of diamonds!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight flexibility. Your emotions tend to dominate logic. Those who make big promises may be sincere but incapable of following through on asseertions. Know it and protect your own interests. Forces are scattered. Do some double checking for best results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Be thorough enough to read between the lines. Fine print is more important than usual. Accent is on solidity, finalizing of deal, structure, long-range commitments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20- Feb. 18): Relatives may be fighting among themselves. Refuse to be drawn into conflict. You could get caught in middle. Open lines of communication. Someone is trying to impart information. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be a comparison shopper. Seek best possible deal for yourself. Aspects indicate financial difficulty if you are careless or act on impulse. Gain co-operation of family member. Patience, diplomacy become your twin allies.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have knack for getting story behind the story. May will be your most significant month of 1975. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You are sensitive, analytical and a voracious reader. You could succeed in advertising, hospital administration, reporting and publishing.

DECLINED DURING 1974

Accidental deaths in public places, which had been rising in recent years, showed a slight decline during 1974, say estimates made by the National Safety Council in the United States.

No Bidding On Printing Before 1975

A recent Times story on bus schedule printing contracts said Colonist Printers Ltd. of Victoria had been awarded B.C. Hydro printing contracts in previous years without going to public tender.

However, the story could have added that in 1972 Hydro approached six companies asking them if they wanted to bid on the contract. Only Colonist Printers was interested, and was awarded a contract for $6,310 in 1973.

While the order did not go to public tender, other companies had in fact been approached on an informal basis.

In 1974 Colonist Printers was awarded a $27,000 printing contract by B.C. Hydro without going to tender. However, B.C. Hydro considered this an extension of its previous contract with Colonist Printers.

This year, in public tender, Colonist Printers was awarded a new contract against a rival bid, the first time in recent years there had been competition for the printing contract.

$2.7M School For Langford

Construction costs of the new 900-student junior secondary school in Langford are the largest single item in the $4,843,00 capital expense budget for Sooke School District approved this week by the education department.

The budget includes $2,730,000 for constructing the school at Spencer and goldstream this year, plus $275,000 for equipping it.

Two other large projects are additions planned for David Cameron elementary, $336,000, and Wishart elementary, $392,000.

Both schools will have large gymnasiums, change rooms, an administration area and several new classrooms. Land for the Wishart extension has not yet been purchased, superintendent of works Ross Payne said Wednesday.

Woman Says Escapers Held, Beat Husband

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frances Dixon told the British Columbia Supreme Court Wednesday she sat on the floor of their farmhouse beside her bleeding husband for nearly three hours as three escapers from the British Columbia Penitentiary held them at gunpoint last Nov. 25.

The three, Richard Dale Beeman, Robert Mose and Claire Daniel Wilson, are on trial for attempting to murder deputy sheriffs Gilbert Perry, Ben Dixon and police officer Paul Gloutier; of harming deputy sheriff Jerrold Ockey with intent to wound and of keeping Mrs. Dixon under forcible seizure.

The charges arose out of an escape by three prisoners who were being flown to the B.C. Penitentiary at New Westminster from Cassidy Airport near Nanaimo.

Mrs. Dixon said she and her husband had three guns which the men found and used to hold herself, her husband and two teenage friends, Dana Pelto and Pat McCumber, who had come to the farmhouse.

She told the court that the two intruders suddenly took her husband outside and that she followed.

"One man was beating my husband with his fist, the other man was holding him" said Mrs. Dixon. "I asked them why they were doing this and got no answer.

"I thought that I could distract them so I yelled 'stop' then a third man appeared."

She said two of the men carried her husband, a retired Anglican priest, into the house and laid him on the floor, where she held his head in her lap.

She said his face and hands were covered with blood and the bone of one finger was exposed.

Mrs. Dixon said one of the intruders went through the house, took money and clothing while another held them at gunpoint.

Mrs. Dixon said the three waited until dark before tying she and her husband and the two boys with binder twine and leather strips. Then they left the farm in the Dixon's car.

The victims untied themselved and walked half a mile to a neighbor to call police because their own phone would not work.

Drunks Ignored

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Transvaal's attorney-general, noting provincial jails were crowded, directed police not to arrest any drunks this year unless they were suspected of committing crimes.

School Bids Accepted

A bid of $382,508 by Paterson Construction Ltd., lowest of three tenders, has been approved by Greater Victoria school board on a project of extensive reconstruction of Highrock junior secondary school.

The project is the first of a two-stage improvement of the building.

The board accepted the $220,940 bid of H. E. Fowler and Sons Ltd. for renovations to Spectrum community high school, the former Mt. View school on Carey Road.

Fowler's was the lowest of five bids.

Work on both projects won't begin till the current strike of school board non-teaching staff is settled.

Emmanuelle: Pornography With Fine Scenery

By AL FORREST

The pornographic film, the first one distributed by a major movie company (Columbia), is dedicated to the proposition that a movie will have class if everyone speaks French.

It has English subtitles.

Apparently it is also class to send the viewer hunting for the subtitles whenever an undraped lady crosses the screen.

And the subtitles are endless. Because the characters talk. And talk. And talk.

For example, they kiss. (It doesn't matter who. After a while they all start to look alike.)

"Do you think," he breathes, "that love is like a rose petal."

"No," she sighs. "It is like a flower growing wild, unpicked and unplucked."

"But what," he says, between kisses, "what is the meaning of true sensuality."

"I think," she replies, "that sensuality is eroticism and eroticism is a passion and passion is . . ."

"A rose petal?"

"I don't know. Possibly."

And on. And on.

Emmanuelle is the wife of a French diplomat, who is busy chasing all the girls in sight and encourages his wife to do likewise. That is, to chase the men. Or the girls. It doesn't matter.

The action—or rather the talk — takes place in Bangkok, up there in Thailand, which seems appropriate enough for a pornographic film.

Some of the erotic scenes are a bit outrageous but there are not many. The main attraction of the movie is the technicolor tour of the Thailand countryside.

Sylvia Kristel in the title role is a very attractive young woman, when she shuts up. She has a very pleasant voice, really, but she does go on and on — and everybody else is as bad or worse.

The unstated theme of Emmanuelle is that lovemaking is okay but to talk about it is naughty. So, trying to be as naughty as possible, everybody talks about it.

The effect is like a satire by Philip Wylie who once imagined that eating, not sex, Emmanuelle sells dirty talk, but wrapped up in flowery philosophical concepts that are first interesting, then boring and finally annoying.

Some day somebody may remake Emmanuelle with no dialogue, simply violins and harps in the background, and it would be a thoroughly enjoyable film—for those whose tastes run to a little gamey was the great taboo subject in our society. He described scenes of steaks being used on billboards to sell cars and disreputable characters lurking in alleyways selling dirty oranges.

Rush for Tickets To Attractions

The Victoria Visitors Information Centre has sold 1,500 of its 8,000 special tickets to local tourist attractions in the first two days of selling, VIC director Floss Prior said Wednesday.

The $2 tickets permit Victorians to visit seven local attractions at a price of about 28 cents each, including bus fare.

The special tickets can be used Saturday, Sunday and Monday at Undersea Gardens, Maritime Museum, Sealand, Royal London Wax Museum, Miniature World, Classic Car Museum and Anne Hathaway's Cottage.

Double decker buses leave the VIC centre on the Causeway at about half-hour intervals, starting at 10 a.m. each day to take Victorians to Sealand and Anne Hathaway's Cottage. The other attractions can be reached on foot. The bus ride is free.

Ticket sales are limited to 8,000 to prevent overcrowding at the attractions.

GARDENING

Squash, Marrows for All Tastes

Squash and marrows are grown by most home gardeners. With 28 different varieties from which to choose, each gardener should be able to find one or more to suit the tastes and requirements of the family.

Squash are divided into two groups, summer and winter; the summer squash and marrows are picked small and used immediately, winter squash are left on the vines to mature for storage.

Size can vary from small, around three pounds each, to giants of 60 pounds or more. Our cool spring weather and moderately warm summer temperatures are not conducive to success with the giants.

Another limiting factor is the size of the vegetable garden. Some types of cucurbits (the overall name for squash, marrows, melons, and cucumbers) make long vines before flowers are formed. Many gardens lack sufficient space for such plants. In a slow cool season there may be no flowers until late July or early August, leaving a minimum of time for maturing the fruits.

Other types make much shorter growths, flower earlier, and are more easily accommodated in the average garden, while bush types make no runners at all. The latter bear heavy crops of fruits which mature rapidly, but are mainly summer varieties.

The symbol of fall in Canada has long been a field of withered corn stalks among which pumpkins are maturing in the sun. This idea of growing pumpkins in the shade of corn is now being investigated.

Present experiments seem to indicate all cucurbits flower earlier in partial shade. A test carried out here last year was inconclusive due to the cool season, but will be tried again this year. Removable bamboo shades on stakes one metre long (36 ins.) were used over bush and short trailing types.

Cucurbits have male and female flowers on separate stems, the pollen from the male flower reaching the female flower by wind dispersal and insect movement (not necessarily bees). Overhead watering, or frequent rain, wets the pollen and limits dispersal. Always water with an open-ended hose right over the root area, not over the plants.

When fresh seed is used (last year's crop) the plants tend to produce many male flowers early in the season, the female or fruiting flowers coming much later, sometimes after all the male flowers are over. This is not too serious when other varieties are growing nearby to provide pollination.

However, seed which is three years old produces many more female flowers earlier in the season, and fewer male flowers, which is ideal from the gardener's angle. Seed purchased this year will give better results in 1977 and '78.

The oft repeated directive to "sow in hills" is not to be taken literally. Sowing on a raised mound is essential in wet lowland soils to prevent a disease called collar-rot, but is disastrous in our rainless summers as many allotment gardeners discovered last year.

An apparent contradiction is the excellent results obtained when cucurbits are grown on top of a compost heap, but here we have a mass of moisture holding humus into which the roots can spread.

By placing a 15 centimetre (6 in.) layer of soil from an old compost heap on top of a pile collected over winter, we can make an excellent bed for cucurbits.

Locally, it is best to start the seed indoors around late March to early April, to have strong plants to set out around the beginning of June. The recommended early June sowings outdoors in warm foil at 18 deg. C (65 degs. F) are not successful here because our soils are not that warm.

Types and varieties that have been normally successful in local home gardens, and which cover the needs of the average family, will be given in this column next week.

U.S. Warned Slump Worsening

WASHINGTON (WP) — The chief economist of New York's First National City Bank said Tuesday that the recession gripping the United States could deepen late this summer to almost twice its current depth.

"Industrial production is now down 11 per cent from what it was on November of 1973," Leif H. Olsen, senior vice-president of the First Citibank, told the Senate Subcommittee on Multinational Corporations. "It could go down another four to nine points, which would bring it down 15 to 20 per cent from the 1973 peak."

"It should reach a bottom this summer," Olsen said. "No sooner than July and possibly as late as the end of September."

The Citibank economist said the current recession was almost three times as bad as the worst postwar recession, the one in 1957-58 that saw the gross national product drop by almost 4 per cent. He called the current recession "the deepest one since the one which occurred in 1937-38."

Meanwhile, the Ford administration has revised its earlier forecast and said today that unemployment will probably climb above 8.5 per cent and may be 9 per cent before it starts going down late this summer.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, offered the new and gloomier predictions to the senate budget committee.

"I would be surprised if we did not see unemployment in excess of 8.5 per cent," he said.

Five weeks ago, Greenspan predicted unemployment would not peak above 8.5 per cent and would average 8.1 per cent this year. It has held steady at 8.2 per cent the past two months.

Socreds Short Of Full Slate

EDMONTON (CP) — A last-minute drive by Social Credit failed to produce a full slate of candidates for the March 26 Alberta election as the deadline for nomination passed Wednesday.

The governing Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party — which held only one seat in the last legislature — fielded full slates of 75 candidates each.

But Social Credit, which had ruled Alberta for 36 years until Peter Lougheed's Conservatives took over 3½ years ago, goes into the election with 70 official candidates, four short of its goal. The Liberals have 46.

Social Credit Leader Werner Schmidt had conceded that the party was having trouble finding candidates for some urban ridings, but said as late as last week that he expected to find suitable people for the vacancies.

When the election was called Feb. 14, the Conservatives had candidates already nominated for all legislature seats while Social Credit had 22, the NDP 24 and Liberals 10.

CRYSTAL BALLS JUST DON'T SEEM TO GRAB US

We read a good deal about advertising research and are frequently reminded of some mystical incantation — figures mysteriously projected, multiplied, divided, contorted to form a supposedly attractive story.

What ever happened to the good old how-many-copies-were-really-sold counts? That's the type of thing on which advertising rates are based.

It's for that very reason we have a no-nonsense, no-mystery ABC audit report of our circulation audience.

If you aren't strong on crystal balls either, then ask to see a copy of our latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Be ABC-sure!

New System Rotates City Judges

A new system of rotating judges in Victoria provinical court starting April 1 was announced Wednesday by District Judge William Ostler.

The court's five full-time judges will alternate in the main section so that each will spend at least one month there this year.

The other judges are Harold Alder of the second criminal section, Fred Green of the traffic court, D. K. MacAdam and Douglas Campbell of family court.

Alder will start the rotation.

Court sections will also start work at 9:30 a.m. daily instead of 10, starting April 1.

Play Wildly Heady Romp

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A word to those going to the Royal Theatre tonight to see the Stratford Festival Company's A Comedy of Errors:

In case anyone thinks the Shakespeare production will be like mom and pop used to talk about — and in case a husband being taken along for some culture thinks he will be bored — it isn't and he won't.

There is a valid argument for doing Shakespeare in a fresh, innovative manner as long as the beauty of the language is preserved.

The argument is strongest in the case of the comedies. For what was Shakespeare in his time but a man of the theatre. An actor-playwright, one who knew the value of illusion, whose purpose was to entertain the journeyman and the merchant as much as his aristocratic and royal patrons.

Such a man would have welcomed joyously, modern theatrical effects and probably have applauded the breaking with stale tradition.

One caution, however. It is necessary to question whether a particular innovative treatment makes the play come alive.

What it does for the play is more important than what it does for the actors.

With the Stratford Festival's two tour productions considered in this light, one is quite delightfully successful, the other considerably less so.

Tonight's show, Comedy of Errors, is a virtuoso performance. It is a wildly heady romp which definitely makes the most of Shakespeare's farcical plot revolving about a double set of twins and a complexity of mistaken identities.

Director Robin Phillips has set it somewhere in the late 1880s and pictorially at least, in the American Old West.

To this, co-director David Toguri has added some funky bits of choreography and the set designer has provided a splendid version of a covered wagon that becomes all things to all people, even symbolizing a convent retreat in the final scene.

An assortment of characters out of a western spoof ebb and flow upon the stage, including a delightful send-up of a medicine man.

The anachronisms of time and place are a bit difficult to come to terms with at first but one soon adjusts and before long it simply adds to the whole beautiful joke.

The high style, and joyous bounce of the play is carried out with panache by a spirited cast with special emphasis on the sleek performances of Nicholas Pennell, Barry MacGregor, Bernard Hopkins and Richard Whelan as the double set of twins and Jackie Burroughs and Gale Garnett as the female leads.

Two Gentlemen of Verona is more of a romantic piece than comedy. It is much given to soliloquizing and ornate passages eulogizing love.

The period selected for this is free modern. It begins like a contemporary ballet and indeed the whole performance seems part ballet, part play.

It is an interesting concept but it doesn't work half as well as the outrageous Comedy of Errors. It is too mannered, conveying a sense of artificiality that is related to the Masque but which does not sit easily within the casualness of ultra modernity.

Yet there were moments of real beauty and sincerity. Mia Anderson's Julia is typical of these moments. A fine senstive beautifully supple performer, she moves like the rippling of light on water.

The scene in which she curls upon the stage floor, mourning over and piecing together the letter she has wilfully torn up, is exquisitely done.

Eric Donkin and Crab the dog provide sharp-edged sturdy comedy wihin all the artiness and the effects achieved with light are notable.

This is a company of young actors who move beautifully, sound well and can sustain vitality and whatever one feels about the innovation, they are a tonic for theatrical hunger.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 19-year-old Victoria youth learned the cost involved in attempting to fool the police when he appeared in Victoria provincial court Wednesday on a charge of public mischief.

Henry Lawrence, 3580 Saanich Road, pleaded guilty and was fined $250.

Prosecutor Clarence Vause said Lawrence phoned police Feb. 25 reporting his stereo, which he said had been stolen from the back seat of his car, was being displayed in the window of Universal Traders, 584 Johnston.

"Investigations indicated, however, that Lawrence had pawned his own stereo and was trying to have the police help him get it back," Vause said.

"He tells me quite candidly that he didn't know it was against the law," defence lawyer Jasper Bomhof said, to which Judge William Ostler retorted — "I don't accept that explanation any more than I expect you do."

Vause cited Lawrence's criminal record which included breaking and entering and theft, and dangerous use of a firearm.

Bomhof said the offences occurred when Lawrence was about 16.

"They were impulsive boyhood offences, certainly not inexcusable, but a sign of immaturity . . . the accused is only 19, he is still a teenager and has a lot to learn in life," Bomhof said.

Bomhof told the court Lawrence's application to join the navy may be hampered if a jail sentence was imposed.

"In spite of all these brave efforts of counsel, I feel you have exhibited criminal behavior," Ostler told Lawrence.

"You have a lot to learn and you had better get at it right away . . . if there are any other offences of this type, you will go to jail."

"If this type of conduct continues, you're going to have to go to jail," Ostler told a 29-year-old man charged the second time in six months with obtaining food by fraud.

Cyril McColgan of 3122 Yew, pleaded guilty to not paying for a $1.30 meal he received Tuesday at Scott's Fine Foods, 650 Yates.

"I was pretty drunk then your honor," McColgan said.

Ostler fined him $75.

Harvey Hugh Gibbs, 22, of 205 Island Highway, received a suspended sentence and one year probation for stealing $381.74 from Dollar a Day Rent a Car, 1800 Douglas.

He pleaded guilty Feb. 24.

Vause said Gibbs went to the office on the pretext of renting a car, and when the salesman left the office for a moment, Gibbs took the cash in the cash register.

Ostler ordered Hibbs to repay the money.

Two men, who pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident, were fined a total of $450.

Vause said Hyde was going south on Cook Nov. 21 when he struck a car travelling in the centre lane, causing about $700 damage.

Police said Hyde got out of his car and inspected the two vehicles, but when the driver of the other car asked him to wait until police arrived, Finlayson said "forget it, buddy," hurried back into his car and sped off.

John Henry Lathem, 41, of 2442 Dickson Road, received a $200 fine. He was involved in a car accident Jan. 31 causing $200 damage to his car and $500 damage to the vehicle he struck.

Robert Parker, 18, of 2974 Oakdowne Road, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and was fined $75.

William Rogers, 44 South Turner, admitted damaging a parked car on South Turner Feb. 2.

Rogers explained his coat was caught as he drove along the narrow street and "brushed the other car" when he looked down to untangle it.

All the parking places on South Turner were filled so he parked his car around the corner and returned.

He said he wrote his telephone number and address on the damaged car.

"Those notes have a habit of blowing away," Ostler told him.

Youth Remanded

Clifford Metcalfe, of 5150 Delmonte, was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $500 for one week for a further appearance on charges of break-in and theft at Owl Drugs, 3189 Douglas, on or about March 5.

Police said a 16-year-old Saanich boy was charged in juvenile court Wednesday with the same offence.

Metcalfe and the juvenile were taken into custody last Friday at Golden, B.C., after they reported a death to RCMP.

Stewart John Goodwin, 17, of 882 Leslie in Saanich, was found dead by his two companions Friday morning at the Rogers Pass summit.

A memorial service for Goodwin will be held at 10:30 a.m. Friday in St. Stephen's Anglican Church, Mt. Newton Cross Road.

PICKETS MASS AT JOHNSON ST. BRIDGE

CUPE Strike Takes Violent Note

The strike by Victoria's outside workers came close to violence today when tension and scoffles followed mass picket demonstrations at the Johnson Street Bridge and Oak Bay junior and senior high schools.

About 100 picket members of various CUPE locals representing outside workers, thronged bridge approaches for more than two hours, empeding road and marine traffic.

The demonstration — "to get things rolling again in negotiations," as one picket explained — generally was free of violence, although there were one or two minor scuffles.

One picket who tried riding the front of a vehicle crossing the bridge was thrown off. The several police officers on the scene stood by observing and occasionally chatting to the union members. No charges were laid.

The bridge picketing started at about 9:30 a.m., when the bridge was supposed to have been raised for marine traffic for one hour.

A police spokesman said most road drivers on finding the bridge blocked by pickets made their way to the Point Ellice (Bay Street) bridge, but some insisted on trying to cross as usual.

A Butler-Lafarge cement barge had to turn back when the crew found the bridge would not be lifted, but a Ministry of Transport spokesman said no MOT traffic was affected.

Among the motorists who waited more than 15 minutes to cross the bridge was David Whiteway, a Victoria West resident.

He said he had been told by "one of the 100 nuts standing on the bridge," that he would be allowed through at 10:30 a.m. — the usual time when it would have been lowered once again for road traffic.

"There's not enough sense among the lot of them to fill a kindergarten," he muttered, moments before he slammed his car into reverse because a picket had leaned against the front of the vehicle.

The union man, a stocky, bearded individual, was told by the angry Whiteway to "put your ass" somewhere else.

When the group parted to allow Whiteway through at 10:30 he accelerated across the bridge, followed by pickets running and shouting.

CUPE Local 50 president Jim Walker told the Times the beefed-up pickets and spot picketing could be repeated later in the day and Friday.

He said it is directed at union members who continue to use the bridge, among them CPR truck drivers and B.C. Hydro bus drivers.

TAKEN FOR A RIDE of a few seconds' duration today was this CUPE picket who tried mounting the front of a station wagon at Johnson Street Bridge. The vehicle was driven by David Whiteway, of Robert Street, who waited more than 15 minutes to cross the mass picket line of about 100 CUPE members. The action obstructed road and marine traffic but was mostly peaceful.

'The Kids Come First'

Greater Victoria school teachers reaffirmed Wednesday their intention to continue teaching despite the CUPE strike.

At a mass meeting, closed to the public, at the Playland Club on Glanford, more than 675 teachers gave unanimous support to a resolution passed Jan. 22 allowing teachers to cross picket lines but not do the work of striking janitorial employees.

The teachers said their contractual obligations to the school board would have to have precedence.

However, the teachers indicated they would maintain a hard union line in all other respects and passed a motion that they would "in no way participate in organizing or helping volunteer cleanup crews within the schools."

The motion had originally read they would not participate in "organizing, helping or condoning,"; but because no one could provide a legal definition of the word "condone" it was dropped.

Another motion, which was referred back to the executive committee for further study would have had a more pressing effect. It proposed Greater Victoria Teachers Association members should not work beside volunteer strikebreakers.

The intention was teachers should leave their classrooms and refuse to teach if volunteer cleaners were present in the school at the same time as both students and teachers.

There was wide-ranging debate over the implications of such action. Some teachers felt it would constitute a breach of their contract. Others considered it nearly impossible to enforce.

"Does that mean we would have to have lookouts to the right and lookouts to the left guarding every door in the school and sounding a warning at the approach of the volunteers?" one teacher queried.

Security was extremely tight prior to the meeting as GVTA officials stood at the front door and checked credentials of teachers streaming through.

A third floor meeting hall in the sports complex was jammed to capacity resulting in an overflow of about 175 teachers being rerouted to a second floor room adjacent to the club lounge overlooking the curling rink.

Those in the room below heard the proceedings over a public address system hastily switched on. Whenever a vote was taken a courier would race upstairs and give the results to the main body.

The votes in each section varied dramatically on the motion that members should not work beside volunteer strikebreakers. The main body voted overwhelmingly to return the motion to the executive committee for more study; those in the room below voted just as over-

Fijian To Get Permit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hari Charan Singh, 27, who was ordered deported last week because he suffered a nervous breakdown in 1974, will get a special permit to remain in Canada but will have to apply for it outside the country.

Singh said Immigration Minister Robert Andras will give him a special permit but he will have to leave Canada and apply for the permit from the United States because the minister can not overrule the immigration board's decision.

A former resident of Fiji, Singh had been working legally in Canada for more than four years when he suffered a two-month breakdown. Under the Immigration Act persons who have suffered mental illness within the preceding seven years are not allowed to enter Canada. The immigration appeal board last week revoked a 1973 order directing that Singh be given landed immigrant status.

Art Lee (L-Vancouver East) said Andras could not overrule the board's decision but could grant the special permit. He said the minister was shocked by the board's decision.

An immigration department spokesman in Ottawa confirmed the permit will be granted and that officials were surprised at the deportation order.

63.7% Sought In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for seven Greater Vancouver municipalities said Wednesday that unions representing 5,000 civic workers are asking for a increase that could amount to 63.7 per cent over one year.

The negotiators said the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union, (VMRE) were seeking an increase of 22 per cent or $200 a month, whichever was greater for all inside employees.

"All outside employees are to receive an increase of $2 an hour with tradesmen to receive an additional but as yet unspecified upward adjustment," a spokesman for the municipal negotiators said.

In addition, they said a cost-of-living adjustment was to be paid on the first days of April, July and October and would call for a 1.5-per-cent pay increase for each one-per-cent increase in the consumer price index for Canada.

The unions had declined to make their demands public. Renewed contracts talks on behalf of the workers in Vancouver, Burnaby, New Westminster North Vancouver city and district, Delta and Richmond broke off Tuesday, less than two days after they had begun.

VMRE spokesman Bob Ross said the employers' statement was distorted because they chose the highest possible figures.

He said the union demands were negotiable and the employers "are deliberately trying to distort the unions' very clear intent to bargain a reasonable contract as quickly as possible."

He said the cost-of-living clause has not been negotiated but the employers included it in their forecast of what the union would cost.

settlement proposed by the

Laborers represented by CUPE now earn $4.52 an hour.

Mayor Studies Charging Levi

Paskin said today he knows "some people will hear of this and just think I'm some kind of nut, but I'm serious about it. It's my way of bringing this whole darn mess before the public."

Paskin made the decision to consider the charge after juveniles broke through an RCMP roadbock and led police on a 110-mile chase Saturday and Sunday.

Paskin said today one of the juveniles is a 14-year-old boy who has escaped from the human resources juvenile centre in Nanaimo 13 times.

"Numerous times when this boy was brought to juvenile court, the probation office made an application to raise him to adult court. Each time that application has been blocked by the human resources department which has taken on a commitment to look after him," Paskin said.

"And each time that commitment has failed."

Levi, as head of the department, has taken on the commitment to look after the boy and "then allows him to walk out of the youth centre any time he wants," Paskin said. "I say the department and Mr. Levi are contributing to juvenile delinquency."

The mayor said the boy is now in the juvenile detention centre in Victoria, but expects him to be brought back up to Duncan to appear in family court there.

He said that even if the application to be made by the probation office to raise the youth to adult court is allowed to go through this time, he will still try to lay the charge against Levi.

"It's not only this incident," he said.

"I am determined that someone is going to do something about this sort of thing. All the philosophy and idealism in the world hasn't worked and it's time someone did something practical."

Union Only Exceptions Irk NDPer

An NDP MLA Wednesday called on the government to either tighten-up or abandon completely its policy of awarding contracts to union shops oly.

Colin Gabelmann (NDP-North Vancouver-Seymour) was referring to the Public Works Fair Employment Act, which states that in certain areas of work the government must award contracts only to firms which have a collective agreement in force.

There are too many exceptions to the act now, said Gablemann, and people are confused about its application.

Armed civilians set up roadblocks on the highways and searched cars. Many were armed with a list of licence numbers prepared by a Communist group.

WCB Halts Work At Cave-In Site

The Workers' Compensation Board has ordered work stopped on a construction site on Fort near Cook where a 34-year-old carpenter died in a cave-in Wednesday afternoon.

Compensation Board official Bill Harrison said today work on the excavation of the seven-storey $2.6 million office building will not be allowed to continue until all exposed earthen walls have been braced according to regulations.

Meanwhile workmen and employees of the developing company, Dunburn Developments, are still reeling under the tragedy which took the life of Dennis Gardner of 658 Hoy Lake.

Dunburn president, Robert Early, said it was the first serious accident in the company's four-year history.

Gardner was buried when a wall gave way as he and another carpenter began to shore a 12-foot deep hole which was to be a footing for the new building.

The other man, Chris Van de Water, 26, managed to duck behind a ladder and crawled to safety.

It took rescue workers more than three hours digging through heavy blue-grey clay before they finally reached Gardner and pulled him free.

Early described Gardner as an "exceptionally fine worker, conscientious, quiet . . . a first-rate fellow," and said he had been an employee of an associate Dunburn company, R & B Construction for the past three-and-a-half years.

Gardner is survived by his wife Karen and three small children, David, 7, Sherri, 6, and James, 2. Mrs. Gardner is eligible for a lifetime pension from the WCB.

Early said his company would assist the family "in whatever way we can."

An inquest is expected to be held sometime within the next day or two, Coroner Edmund St. Jorre said.

Vancouver Mail Interrupted

Times News Services

Vancouver and Montreal mail services were interrupted today when striking maintenance workers put up pickets outside the post offices.

In Vancouver, letter carriers and postal truck drivers were honoring the picket lines and the downtown areas were not expected to have any mail deliveries today.

The Montreal mail holdup went into its second day today following a decision taken Wednesday night by more than 1,000 letter carriers in a meeting that almost ended in pandemonium when their union leader, Guy Morrisette, urged a return to work.

Cambodia Aid Given Setback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration's efforts to gain additional United States aid for the faltering government of Cambodia suffered major setbacks today in the House of Representatives and Senate.

Dredging Inquiry Demanded in Parliament

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition parties demanded in the Commons Wednesday a full public inquiry into all federal dredging operations after charges were laid against a number of firms and top business executives across the country.

One of the executives charged with conspiring to defraud the government was a former federal Liberal campaign chairman in B.C.

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp repeatedly rejected the demand for a public inquiry on the grounds that it would interfere with the trials of the 14 executives and 13 dredging companies.

But he declared that the fact that the former Liberal campaign chairman — Hugh Martin of Vancouver — has been charged shows his government is acting impartially in the politically-embarrassing case.

Twelve companies were listed in the indictment as being charged with one or more counts of conspiracy, but lawyers referred consistently to 13 and 13 were mentioned in the counts. Left off the list was Construction Aggregates, the only U.S.-based company. The prosecutors confirmed Wednesday night that Construction Aggregates is being charged.

Meanwhile, Solicitor General Warren Allmand, still under attack by the opposition for an alleged attempt to slow down the investigation which began in Hamilton Harbor in 1972, indicated that RCMP investigations into federal contracts are not completed and that more charges may be laid.

Up until Wednesday the dredging scandal had caused the conviction of three men connected with Hamilton Harbor operations, the resignation of Ontario Solicitor General George Kerr and the attempted resignation of federal Labor Minister John Munro — a Hamilton MP — who was released on Wednesday from hospital where he was being treated for exhaustion.

Munro, Allmand and Transport Minister Jean Marchand have been under heavy fire in the Commons for the past month over alleged political implications of the dredging contract scandal.

It is not clear just how the initial information came to authorities — Hamilton City Council raised the first public suspicions in September, 1972 — but prosecutors left the impression that unnamed persons provided basic information and will testify.

Businessman Ken Barfknecht of Bolton, Ont., said Wednesday he has been told assassination contracts have been let on the lives of he and his wife because of what he knows and now fears for his life.

Barfknecht said in an interview he went to RCMP in the summer of 1972 as a result of problems in operating his ship salvage business on Hamilton harbor and gave them information.

Local Property Sales Up 28% in February

The pace of real estate sales continues to pick up in Victoria with $10.9 million worth of property sold through the multiple listing service in February, up 28.4 per cent from $8.5 million in the same month a year ago.

There were 232 real estate sales through MLS in February, up 36 per cent from 171 the previous February and up from 192 sales in January.

The statistics were released Wednesday by the Victoria Real Estate Board.

The average price of property sold in February was $47,190, down $2,670 from an average of $49,860 the previous February, but this did not mean house prices were lower than a year ago.

Prices for average transactions were much higher in January.

As a result, the average real estate transaction in the first two months was at $48,900 this year, more than $5,000 above the average sale in the first two months of 1974.

The board cautions against translating average property sale prices into average house prices. The average property sale price includes the average of various types of real estate sold during the month, including lots and apartments.

Sales volume so far this year is 424 units selling for a total of $20.7 million in the first two months. This is up from 367 units worth $15.8 million in the first two months of 1974.

The board rates the number of listings available at the present time as adequate, although an increased demand for houses as a result of lower mortgage interest rates could result in a shortage of properties by June.

There were 374 listings received by MLS in January and another 434 in February.

FOREST CUT 'UNDERVALUED'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Scandinavia produces almost 1.6 times the volume of timber produced in B.C. from forests that are only about half as large, says Resources Minister Bob Williams.

The minister told graduates of the Univerity of B.C.'s forestry class the information comes from a report by a Scandinavian firm of consultants retained by the government.

He said the study was ordered because the government thought it would be worthwhile to bring in an an outside firm to study the differences between logging methods here and in other countries.

"In the international comparison, the present annual allowable cut in B.C. in relation to the existing resources and productive capacity of the forest land is rather undervalued," he said.

"For instance, Scandinavia at present produces almost 1.6 times the volume removed from the B.C. forests from a total growing stock which is 45 per cent of that in B.C."

A Simple Manoeuvre To Save the Lives Of Choking Victims

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Heimlich Hug isn't a dance step or a wrestling hold. It's a sifple "manoeuvre" which could save your life if you're choking.

John Doe is out to dinner with friends at his favorite restaurant. He's had a few drinks and then his steak arrives. He's hungry and maybe he's also a glutton. The mouthful of steak is too big and he doesn't chew it properly.

Suddenly he leaps to his feet, clutching his throat. He tries to talk but he can't make a sound. He collapses, starts to turn blue. In a few moments he's going to be dead.

Most people would think he's had a heart attack so such cases are sometimes labelled "cafe coronaries." But John Doe is strangling to death on his steak.

And he can't make a sound to tell anyone in the brief time he remains conscious. (And that's the tipoff. A heart attack victim will still be able to talk, says Maccagno.)

What to do? The Heimlich Hug.

—If the victim is standing or sitting, stand behind him and wrap your arms around his waist.

—Repeat several times if necessary.

What happens is the air trapped in the lungs by the obstruction in the throat is compressed, providing a driving force against the obstruction. It usually drives it out.

If the victim has collapsed, turn him on his back and kneel astride his hips.

—Press forcefully with the heel of your hand into the victim's abdomen with a quick upward thrust.

—Repeat several times if necessary.

The Heimlich manoeuvre or "hug" was developed by Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, director of surgery and head of the esophagus centre at the Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati.

In the current issue of Emergency Medicine Heimlich notes there are 3,900 totally avoidable deaths in the U.S. of this sort annually, meaning there are probably 400 or so a year in Canada.

Since word of the technique or manoeuvre has received publicity, a stream of reports have come in of lives saved by it, including resuscitation of drowning victims.

Most of the reported rescues were handled by laymen. At least 35 lives were saved with it last year, a medical convention in Montreal in December was told.

Maccagno said the manoeuvre hasn't been used in the emergency department at Royal Jubilee Hospital. Action to help choking victims is needed long before they can reach a hospital.

He has some reservations about the technique, pointing out the possibility of stomach rupture or damage to liver or spleen if too much pressure is applied.

But he also sees the Heimlich Hug being taught routinely in future as a valuable rescue technique.

Some Thoughts at 60 When Nothing Happened

Somewhere in the back of my mind, where I keep a disorganized file index of future column subjects, I'd planned a little piece on reaching a 60th birthday, but it really doesn't look very good so goodbye.

What I mean is that, apart from the intense heat of the candles, getting to be 60 didn't affect me as much as I'd anticipated. Oh, I cried a lot, sure. But there really wasn't all the soul-searching that I'd expected. It just kind of surprised me that I'd made it. "Me? Sixty?" I babbled when the cake flared up. "You might as well try for sixty-one," said my wife, ever the philosopher. That was all there was to it.

About the only thing that was new, really, was that I began to think a little bit about retirement. It just came to me in a flash that in exactly five years I can walk into the managing editor's office and say, "Shove it, Gord."

I can't think why I would, mind you, and nobody ever does. Guys who have spent a lifetime planning that last delicious moment dissolve into globs of sentimentality when the moment arrives and suddenly discover that they hate to be going. We had a fellow here named Pete Sallaway who, for the last full year of his service, used to mark a desk calendar, chuckling evilly as he lopped off each day. When the final one came they had to practically drag him away.

Once, when I was in my late thirties or early forties, I wrote an essay on retirement that was widely reprinted, even, I'm now ashamed to say, in some of the old-age-pension journals.

I thought I had the answer to retirement, you see. I thought that a sort of controlled senility, or second childhood, would be the answer. I wrote about lying on a beach, idly throwing pebbles into the water, giggling away the golden years.

The trouble with this, I now see all too clearly, is that the years do not bring with them the slightest lessening in ambition or any slackening in the desire to do something productive. If anything, they merely increase them. All my own dreams of sloth have gone with the wind of 60 years. Call me a fool, if you will, but I've bigger, wilder plans now than I had at 20. Yes, call me a fool.

I was disappointed, too, to find that I'd no fixed, cast-iron, self-protective philosophy when I'd reached this plateau. Guys of 60 are supposed to suddenly mouth maxims like Dr. Chase's Almanac or, at least, arrive at some sort of inner understanding of themselves, often mouthed to captive grandchildren on their bony old knees. Not me. Life has never seemed more mystifying than it does right now. Far from accepting any home truths I fruitlessly question everything.

Yet I think that age does bring a sense of realism to most of us and that this passes as philosophy and may even be a philosophy. The fatalistic shrug is now the best gesture I know to accept life's disasters. When the joys come along that's a little extra dividend. At 60 a man learns, if nothing else, that the disasters and the joys usually balance out.

There's some compensation, too, in knowing that you probably never had such control over your mind. Physically, you may be past your prime. Your daughter is going to beat you at tennis, 6-0, 6-0. But almost anybody at 60 has a head full of experience, savvy, judgment and dirty tricks that make up a kind of encyclopedia of response to any given situation. A man at 60 knows when to play it straight or when to cheat like a gentleman. If he doesn't he's wasted all those years.

If I'd expected some magic religious conversion on such an arbitrary date I was doomed, as the saying goes, to failure.

It's often said that the non-believer simply has to reach the age when he starts seriously to think about the long claw of the sea-puss to convert him and, of course, there are older people who do go into the church in the hope of some last-minute salvation, or, at least, to hedge their bet on the hereafter. Now that nearly all my close friends are, themselves, over 60 I find that this is rare.

Most over-60s, I find, have a hell of a time believing there's one God. The reason, I suppose, is that it's so hard to believe in a Supreme Being who'll wait around until a man's or a woman's defences are down, then Pow! Wham! Ker-Pow! cut them down with the most crippling and degrading diseases known to man.

I don't say that was my own reason, mind you, for failing to see a sudden light, but, as I've admitted, not much of anything seems to have happened at an age that I'd always though might be momentous. Heigh ho.

Intern Strike No Threat To Patient Care—Hospitals

Twenty-one Victoria interns have voted in favor of a strike but spokesmen at the city's two general hospitals said today patient care would not be seriously affected if it happens.

Interns and resident doctors in Greater Vancouver and the two local teaching hospitals have voted 94 per cent for strike action to start Monday in a contract dispute.

There are 13 interns at Royal Jubilee Hospital and eight at Victoria General but the major impact would be felt at Vancouver General, where there are 150 to 200 interns and residents.

Dr. Craig Beattie, president of the Professional Association of Residents and Interns of B.C., representing more than 270 doctors, said in Vancouver Wednesday the vote to withdraw services was in support of a request for arbitration.

The doctors have been negotiating with the B.C. Health Association for the past five months but have reached an impasse, Dr. Beattie said. The association's first contract expired at the end of last year.

A spokesman in the labor relations section of the BCHA said today the main issue is money. Junior residents now receive $8,000 a year.

At Jubilee Hospital, Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director, said he wants to assure patients and public that an interns' strike will not have any serious affect on patient care. That view was echoed by Jim Fair, executive director at Victoria General.

SPEC Wins Campaign Over Ganges Sewage

The provincial Pollution Control Board has upheld an appeal by environmentalists and turned down a plan by the Capital Regional Board to discharge sewage into Ganges Harbor on Salt Spring Island.

In a letter to the regional board Wednesday PCB chairman Ben Marr said the region had failed to show the proposed system would not cause pollution in the harbor.

The plan had been opposed by the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society in Vancouver after the regional board last year had been granted a permit.

The regional board had proposed a sewage collection system to serve the built-up portion of Ganges, a total of about 240 property owners, secondary treatment of the sewage and an outfall of about 1,000 feet to discharge the treated sewage into Ganges Harbor. Ganges currently has only individual septic tank systems.

SPEC had opposed the plan, arguing the harbor waters were inadequate to disperse the effluent without hazard and pointing out there were recreation beaches within 2,500 feet of the proposed outfall. It suggested a longer outfall might serve.

The pollution control board's ruling today said in part:

" . . . while the board is on record as recognizing discharge of secondary treated sewage into marine waters as a generally satisfactory method of municipal waste treatment, it is the opinion of the board that in this particular case of discharge into confined and shallow waters, (the regional board) has failed to show that the works proposed will not cause pollution in the Ganges Harbor."

George Heinekey, director for Salt Spring Island on the regional board, said today he was startled by the decision, anticipating there might have been more stringent conditions imposed but not that the proposal would get outright rejection.

Heinekey said one alternative would be to tell the province: "You turned it down. You put in the system."

'Suspicious' Fire

A fire in a locked locker room in the Stanley Apartments, 1350 Stanley, Wednesday night has prompted an investigation by Victoria fire department officials.

Deputy chief R. J. Coates said the fire, wich originated in a pile of boxes in a walkway of the locker room, was "highly suspicious" but would not say outright if it was arson.

Firemen, called to the scene at 10:10 p.m. when a heat detection device in the locker room triggered the alarm, and little trouble containing the blaze.

Coates said three lockers and contents were destroyed. He placed damage at roughly $3,500.

Fast Trial Requested

Kenneth George Katrensky, 27, of 308 Edward, pleaded not guilty in Victoria provincial court Wednesday afternoon to robbing the Bank of Nova Scotia at Douglas and Courtney of $1,484 only three hours before.

Katrensky, saying he wanted the quickest trial method, chose trial in provincial court.

Ostler remanded the case to Friday morning and told Katrensky he could seek advice from Legal Aid while held in jail.

City police said a young man approached teller Donna Lee Budd, 20, and held one hand in a jacket pocket as if to simulate a gun. He gave her a paper bag on which was written in black letters, Empty Your Till.

After he received the money, the man slowly walked out of the bank. The teller told manageress Jeannine Robson there had been a holdup and pointed to a departing man.

While the manageress phoned the police, Miss Budd started out the main door after the man.

Recognizing a frequent customer of the bank, she asked him to help follow the man who was heading north along Douglas from Courtney.

Constables Larry Pickering and Robert Blackie arrived in a police car, Miss Budd pointed to the suspect and he was arrested without resistance.

The customer who joined the pursuit walked away without leaving his name.

Police praised Miss Budd's actions and one official said she had reacted as a policewoman would.

Credit Unions Buck Rebate Shops

Victoria credit unions are making loans to keep people out of the hands of tax rebate shops, says Vincent Devries, manager of the Provincial Government Employees credit Union.

"We have made a number of loans to people expecting rebates — and we will continue doing this," he said.

"I am concerned that so many people seem to be going to these tax rebate shops first, feeling they will be turned down by a credit union or a bank.

"They should try their credit union or bank first if they are expecting a rebate. They will save a great deal of money."

The local credit unions are responding to a plea from A. R. Glen, president of B.C. Central Credit Union, that funds be made available as loans against tax rebates.

Glen had said tax rebate shops were charging "outrageous" fees, as much as 50 per cent of the rebate.

Devries said the Provincial Government Employees Credit Union does not ask members to sign over the rebate to them, it simply makes a short-term loan and trusts the member to pay when the rebate comes.

"There is too much administration work involved in signing over tax rebates. We find it is easier and it works out better to just trust people."

The rate of loan approvals at credit unions is high, Devries said.

Provincial Government Credit Union approval rate is higher than most because most of the members are working. Unemployed members are the only marginal cases.

The Victoria credit union handles between 150 and 170 loan applications per month and rejects only one or two, Devries said.

Many of the loans being approved are against tax rebates and others are against retroactive pay.

Tax rebate cheques will be in the mail as soon as amendments to the Income Tax Act, approved by the House of Commons, are dealt with in the Senate. Final approval is expected momentarily.

B.C. Central Credit union has urged the federal government to outlaw the practice of assigning tax rebates to other people, thereby putting the refund shops out of business.

$50,000 BAIL

Bail has been set at $50,000 for a Victoria man charged with murder in connection with the death of his wife March 1.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton set the bail in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday for Edward Robert Nicholet, 21, of 1345 Pandora.

PICKETS MASS AT JOHNSON ST. BRIDGE

CUPE Strike Takes Violent Note

The strike by Victoria's outside workers came close to violence today when tension and scuffles followed mass picket demonstrations at the Johnson Street Bridge and Oak Bay junior and senior high schools.

About 100 picket members of various CUPE locals representing outside workers, thronged bridge approaches for more than two hours, impeding road and marine traffic.

The demonstration — "to get things rolling again in negotiations," as one picket explained — generally was free of violence, although there were one or two minor scuffles.

One picket who tried riding the front of a vehicle crossing the bridge was thrown off. The several police officers on the scene stood by observing and occasionally chatting to the union members. No charges were laid.

The bridge picketing started at about 9:30 a.m., when the bridge was supposed to have been raised for marine traffic for one hour.

A police spokesman said most road drivers on finding the bridge blocked by pickets made their way to the Point Ellice (Bay Street) bridge, but some insisted on trying to cross as usual.

A Butler-Lafarge cement barge had to turn back when the crew found the bridge would not be lifted, but a Ministry of Transport spokesman said no MOT traffic was affected.

Among the motorists who waited more than 15 minutes to cross the bridge was David Whiteway, a Victoria West resident.

He said he had been told by "one of the 100 nuts standing on the bridge," that he would be allowed through at 10:30 a.m. — the usual time when it would have been lowered once again for road traffic.

"There's not enough sense among the lot of them to fill a kindergarten," he muttered, moments before he slammed his car into reverse because a picket had leaned against the front of the vehicle.

The union man, a stocky, bearded individual, was told by the angry Whiteway to "put your ass" somewhere else.

When the group parted to allow Whiteway through at 10:30 he accelerated across the bridge, followed by pickets running and shouting.

CUPE Local 50 president Jim Walker told the Times the beefed-up pickets and spot picketing could be repeated later in the day and Friday.

He said it is directed at union members who continue to use the bridge, among them CPR truck drivers and B.C. Hydro bus drivers.

Hundreds of Oak Bay junior and senior secondary school students congregated around

'The Kids Come First'

Greater Victoria school teachers reaffirmed Wednesday their intention to continue teaching despite the CUPE strike.

At a mass meeting, closed to the public, at the Playland Club on Glanford, more than 675 teachers gave unanimous support to a resolution passed Jan. 22 allowing teachers to cross picket lines but not do the work of striking janitorial employees.

The teachers said their contractual obligations to the school board would have to have precedence.

However, the teachers indicated they would maintain a hard union line in all other respects and passed a motion that they would "in no way participate in organizing or helping volunteer cleanup crews within the schools."

The motion had originally read they would not participate in "organizing, helping or condoning," but because no one could provide a legal definition of the word "condone" it was dropped.

Another motion, which was referred back to the executive committee for further study would have had a more pressing effect. It proposed Greater Victoria Teachers Association members should not work beside volunteer strikebreakers.

The intention was teachers should leave their classrooms and refuse to teach if volunteer cleaners were present in the school at the same time as both students and teachers.

There was wide-ranging debate over the implications of such action. Some teachers felt it would constitute a breach of their contract. Others considered it nearly impossible to enforce.

"Does that mean we would have to have lookouts to the right and lookouts to the left guarding every door in the school and sounding a warning at the approach of the volunteers?" one teacher queried.

Security was extremely tight prior to the meeting as GVTA officials stood at the front door and checked credentials of teachers streaming through.

A third floor meeting hall in the sports complex was jammed to capacity resulting in an overflow of about 175 teachers being rerouted to a second floor room adjacent to the club lounge overlooking the curling rink.

Those in the room below heard the proceedings over a public address system hastily switched on. Whenever a vote was taken a courier would race upstairs and give the results to the main body.

The votes in each section varied dramatically on the motion that members should not work beside volunteer strikebreakers. The main body voted overwhelmingly to return the motion to the executive committee for more study; those in the room below voted just as over-

TAKEN FOR A RIDE of a few seconds' duration today was this CUPE picket who tried mounting the front of a station wagon at Johnson Street Bridge. The vehicle was driven by David Whiteway, of Robert Street, who waited more than 15 minutes to cross the mass picket line of about 100 CUPE members. The action obstructed road and marine traffic but was mostly peaceful.

63.7% Sought In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for seven Greater Vancouver municipalities said Wednesday that unions representing 5,000 civic workers are asking for a increase that could amount to 63.7 per cent over one year.

The negotiators said the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union, (VMRE) were seeking an increase of 22 per cent or $200 a month, whichever was greater for all inside employees.

"All outside employees are to receive an increase of $2 an hour with tradesmen to receive an additional but as yet unspecified upward adjustment," a spokesman for the municipal negotiators said.

In addition, they said a cost-of-living adjustment was to be paid on the first days of April, July and October and would call for a 1.5-per-cent pay increase for each one-per-cent increase in the consumer price index for Canada.

The unions had declined to make their demands public. Renewed contracts talks on behalf of the workers in Vancouver, Burnaby, New Westminster, North Vancouver city and district, Delta and Richmond broke off Tuesday, less than two days after they had begun.

VMRE spokesman Bob Ross said the employers' statement was distorted because they chose the highest possible figures.

He said the union demands were negotiable and the employers "are deliberately trying to distort the unions' very clear intent to bargain a reasonable contract as quickly as possible."

He said the cost-of-living clause has not been negotiated but the employers included it in their forecast of what the settlement proposed by the union would cost.

The employers said that based on the unions' prediction of the consumer price index increase this year, the clause could produce a 13.5 per cent salary increase.

Fijian To Get Permit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hari Charan Singh, 27, who was ordered deported last week because he suffered a nervous breakdown in 1974, will get a special permit to remain in Canada but will have to apply for it outside the country.

Singh said Immigration Minister Robert Andras will give him a special permit but he will have to leave Canada and apply for the permit from the United States because the minister can not overrule the immigration board's decision.

A former resident of Fiji, Singh had been working legally in Canada for more than four years when he suffered a two-month breakdown. Under the Immigration Act persons who have suffered mental illness within the preceding seven years are not allowed to enter Canada. The immigration appeal board last week revoked a 1973 order directing that Singh be given landed immigrant status.

Art Lee (L-Vancouver East) said Andras could not overrule the board's decision but could grant the special permit. He said the minister was shocked by the board's decision.

An immigration department spokesman in Ottawa confirmed the permit will be granted and that officials were surprised at the deportation order.

Singh, who is a carpenter, is married and has two children. His family is also living legally in Canada.

Mayor Studies Charging Levi

DUNCAN — Mayor Ken Paskin is looking into the possibility of charging provincial Human Resources Minister Norm Levi with contributing to the delinquency of a juvenile.

Paskin said today he knows "some people will hear of this and just think I'm some kind of nut, but I'm serious about it. It's my way of bringing this whole darn mess before the public."

Paskin made the decision to consider the charge after juveniles broke through an RCMP roadblock and led police on a 110-mile chase Saturday and Sunday.

Paskin said today one of the juveniles is a 14-year-old boy who has escaped from the human resources juvenile centre in Nanaimo 13 times.

"Numerous times when this boy was brought to juvenile court, the probation office made an application to raise him to adult court. Each time that application has been blocked by the human resources department which has taken on a commitment to look after him," Paskin said.

"And each time that commitment has failed."

Levi, as head of the department, has taken on the commitment to look after the boy and "then allows him to walk out of the youth centre any time he wants," Paskin said. "I say the department and Mr. Levi are contributing to juvenile delinquency."

The mayor said the boy is now in the juvenile detention centre in Victoria, but expects him to be brought back up to Duncan to appear in family court there.

He said that even if the application to be made by the probation office to raise the youth to adult court is allowed to go through this time, he will still try to lay the charge against Levi.

"It's not only this incident," he said.

"I am determined that someone is going to do something about this sort of thing. All the philosophy and idealism in the world hasn't worked and it's time someone did something practical."

Levi, asked today about the mayor's intention to lay a charge against him, had no comment.

Union Only Exceptions Irk NDPer

An NDP MLA Wednesday called on the government to either tighten-up or abandon completely its policy of awarding contracts to union shops only.

Colin Gabelmann (NDP-North Vancouver-Seymour) was referring to the Public Works Fair Employment Act, which states that in certain areas of work the government must award contracts only to firms which have a collective agreement in force.

There are too many exceptions to the act now, said Gablemann, and people are confused about its application.

WCB Halts Work At Cave-In Site

The Workers' Compensation Board has ordered work stopped on a construction site on Fort near Cook where a 34-year-old carpenter died in a cave-in Wednesday afternoon.

Compensation Board official Bill Harrison said today work on the excavation of the seven-storey $2.6 million office building will not be allowed to continue until all exposed earthen walls have been braced according to regulations.

Meanwhile workmen and employees of the developing company, Dunburn Developments, are still reeling under the tragedy which took the life of Dennis Gardner of 658 Hoy Lake.

Dunburn president, Robert Early, said it was the first serious accident in the company's four-year history.

Gardner was buried when a wall gave way as he and another carpenter began to shore a 12-foot deep hole which was to be a footing for the new building.

The other man, Chris Van de Water, 26, managed to duck behind a ladder and crawled to safety.

It took rescue workers more than three hours digging through heavy blue-grey clay before they finally reached Gardner and pulled him free.

Early described Gardner as an "exceptionally fine worker, conscientious, quiet . . . a first-rate fellow," and said he had been an employee of an associate Dunburn company, R & B Construction for the past three-and-a-half years.

Gardner is survived by his wife Karen and three small children, David, 7, Sherri, 6, and James, 2. Mrs. Gardner is eligible for a lifetime pension from the WCB.

Early said his company would assist the family "in whatever way we can."

An inquest is expected to be held sometime within the next day or two, Coroner Edmond St. Jorre said.

Vancouver Mail Interrupted

Times News Services

Vancouver and Montreal mail services were interrupted today when striking maintenance workers put up pickets outside the post offices.

In Vancouver, letter carriers and postal truck drivers were honoring the picket lines and the downtown areas were not expected to have any mail deliveries today.

The Montreal mail holdup went into its second day today following a decision taken Wednesday night by more than 1,000 letter carriers in a meeting that almost ended in pandemonium when their union leader, Guy Morrisette, urged a return to work.

Meanwhile, representatives of the federal government and striking blue-collar workers meet with a mediator in Toronto today in a "final attempt" to end their dispute.

Dredging Inquiry Demanded in Parliament

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition parties demanded in the Commons Wednesday a full public inquiry into all federal dredging operations after charges were laid against a number of firms and top business executives across the country.

One of the executives charged with conspiring to defraud the government was a former federal Liberal campaign chairman in B.C.

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp repeatedly rejected the demand for a public inquiry on the grounds that it would interfere with the trials of the 14 executives and 13 dredging companies.

But he declared that the fact that the former Liberal campaign chairman — Hugh Martin of Vancouver — has been charged shows his government is acting impartially in the politically-embarrassing case.

Twelve companies were listed in the indictment as being charged with one or more counts of conspiracy, but lawyers referred consistently to 13 and 13 were mentioned in the counts. Left off the list was Construction Aggregates, the only U.S.-based company. The prosecutors confirmed Wednesday night that Construction Aggregates is being charged.

Meanwhile, Solicitor General Warren Allmand, still under attack by the opposition for an alleged attempt to slow down the investigation which began in Hamilton Harbor in 1972, indicated that RCMP investigations into federal contracts are not completed and that more charges may be laid.

Up until Wednesday the dredging scandal had caused the conviction of three men connected with Hamilton Harbor operations, the resignation of Ontario Solicitor General George Kerr and the attempted resignation of federal Labor Minister John Munro — a Hamilton MP — who was released on Wednesday from hospital where he was being treated for exhaustion.

Munro, Allmand and Transport Minister Jean Marchand have been under heavy fire in the Commons for the past month over alleged political implications of the dredging contract scandal.

It is not clear just how the initial information came to authorities — Hamilton City Council raised the first public suspicions in September, 1972 — but prosecutors left the impression that unnamed persons provided basic information and will testify.

Businessman Ken Barfknecht of Bolton, Ont., said Wednesday he has been told assassination contracts have been let on the lives of he and his wife because of what he knows and now fears for his life.

Barfknecht said in an interview he went to RCMP in the summer of 1972 as a result of problems in operating his ship salvage business on Hamilton harbor and gave them information.

A Simple Manoeuvre To Save the Lives Of Choking Victims

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Heimlich Hug isn't a dance step or a wrestling hold. It's a simple "manoeuvre" which could save your life if you're choking.

John Doe is out to dinner with friends at his favorite restaurant. He's had a few drinks and then his steak arrives. He's hungry and maybe he's also a glutton. The mouthful of steak is too big and he doesn't chew it properly.

Suddenly he leaps to his feet, clutching his throat. He tries to talk but he can't make a sound. He collapses, starts to turn blue. In a few moments he's going to be dead.

Most people would think he's had a heart attack so such cases are sometimes labelled "cafe coronaries." But John Doe is strangling to death on his steak.

And he can't make a sound to tell anyone in the brief time he remains conscious. (And that's the tipoff. A heart attack victim will still be able to talk, says Maccagno.)

What to do? The Heimlich Hug.

—If the victim is standing or sitting, stand behind him and wrap your arms around his waist.

—Repeat several times if necessary.

What happens is the air trapped in the lungs by the obstruction in the throat is compressed, providing a driving force against the obstruction. It usually drives it out.

—If the victim has collapsed, turn him on his back and kneel astride his hips.

—Press forcefully with the heel of your hand into the victim's abdomen with a quick upward thrust.

—Repeat several times if necessary.

The Heimlich manoeuvre or "hug" was developed by Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, director of surgery and head of the esophagus centre at the Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati.

In the current issue of Emergency Medicine Heimlich notes there are 3,900 totally avoidable deaths in the U.S. of this sort annually, meaning there are probably 400 or so a year in Canada.

Since word of the technique or manoeuvre has received publicity, a stream of reports have come in of lives saved by it, including resuscitation of drowning victims.

Most of the reported rescues were handled by laymen. At least 35 lives were saved with it last year, a medical convention in Montreal in December was told.

Maccagno said the manoeuvre hasn't been used in the emergency department at Royal Jubilee Hospital. Action to help choking victims is needed long before they can reach a hospital.

He has some reservations about the technique, pointing out the possibility of stomach rupture or damage to liver or spleen if too much pressure is applied.

But he also sees the Heimlich Hug being taught routinely in future as a valuable rescue technique.

Some Thoughts at 60 When Nothing Happened

Somewhere in the back of my mind, where I keep a disorganized file index of future column subjects, I'd planned a little piece on reaching a 60th birthday, but it really doesn't look very good so goodbye.

What I mean is that, apart from the intense heat of the candles, getting to be 60 didn't affect me as much as I'd anticipated. Oh, I cried a lot, sure. But there really wasn't all the soul-searching that I'd expected. It just kind of surprised me that I'd made it. "Me? Sixty?" I babbled when the cake flared up. "You might as well try for sixty-one," said my wife, ever the philosopher. That was all there was to it.

About the only thing that was new, really, was that I began to think a little bit about retirement. It just came to me in a flash that in exactly five years I can walk into the managing editor's office and say, "Shove it, Gord."

I can't think why I would, mind you, and nobody ever does. Guys who have spent a lifetime planning that last delicious moment dissolve into globs of sentimentality when the moment arrives and suddenly discover that they hate to be going. We had a fellow here named Pete Sallaway who, for the last full year of his service, used to mark a desk calendar, chuckling evilly as he lopped off each day. When the final one came they had to practically drag him away.

Once, when I was in my late thirties or early forties, I wrote an essay on retirement that was widely reprinted, even, I'm now ashamed to say, in some of the old-age-pension journals.

I thought I had the answer to retirement, you see. I thought that a sort of controlled senility, or second childhood, would be the answer. I wrote about lying on a beach, idly throwing pebbles into the water, giggling away the golden years.

The trouble with this, I now see all too clearly, is that the years do not bring with them the slightest lessening in ambition or any slackening in the desire to do something productive. If anything, they merely increase them. All my own dreams of sloth have gone with the wind of 60 years. Call me a fool, if you will, but I've bigger, wilder plans now than I had at 20. Yes, call me a fool.

I was disappointed, too, to find that I'd no fixed, cast-iron, self-protective philosophy when I'd reached this plateau. Guys of 60 are supposed to suddenly mouth maxims like Dr. Chase's Almanac or, at least, arrive at some sort of inner understanding of themselves, often mouthed to captive grandchildren on their bony old knees. Not me. Life has never seemed more mystifying than it does right now. Far from accepting any home truths I fruitlessly question everything.

Yet I think that age does bring a sense of realism to most of us and that this passes as philosophy and may even be a philosophy. The fatalistic shrug is now the best gesture I know to accept life's disasters. When the joys come along that's a little extra dividend. At 60 a man learns, if nothing else, that the disasters and the joys usually balance out.

There's some compensation, too, in knowing that you probably never had such control over your mind. Physically, you may be past your prime. Your daughter is going to beat you at tennis, 6-0, 6-0. But almost anybody at 60 has a head full of experience, savvy, judgment and dirty tricks that make up a kind of encyclopedia of response to any given situation. A man at 60 knows when to play it straight or when to cheat like a gentleman. If he doesn't he's wasted all those years.

If I'd expected some magic religious conversion on such an arbitrary date I was doomed, as the saying goes, to failure.

It's often said that the non-believer simply has to reach the age when he starts seriously to think about the long claw of the sea-puss to convert him and, of course, there are older people who do go into the church in the hope of some last-minute salvation, or, at least, to hedge their bet on the hereafter. Now that nearly all my close friends are, themselves, over 60 I find that this is rare.

Most over-60s, I find, have a hell of a time believing there's one God. The reason, I suppose, is that it's so hard to believe in a Supreme Being who'll wait around until a man's or a woman's defences are down, then Pow! Wham! Ker-Pow! cut them down with the most crippling and degrading diseases known to man.

I don't say that was my own reason, mind you, for failing to see a sudden light, but, as I've admitted, not much of anything seems to have happened at an age that I'd always though might be momentous. Heigh ho.

Intern Strike No Threat To Patient Care—Hospitals

Victoria interns have voted in favor of a strike but spokesmen at the city's two general hospitals said today patient care would not be seriously affected if it happens.

Interns and resident doctors in Greater Vancouver and the two local teaching hospitals have voted 94 per cent for strike action to start Monday in a contract dispute.

There are 13 interns at Royal Jubilee Hospital and eight at Victoria General but the major impact would be felt at Vancouver General, where there are 150 to 200 interns and residents.

Dr. Craig Beattie, president of the Professional Association of Residents and Interns of B.C., representing more than 270 doctors, said in Vancouver Wednesday the vote to withdraw services was in support of a request for arbitration.

The doctors have been negotiating with the B.C. Health Association for the past five months but have reached an impasse, Dr. Beattie said. The association's first contract expired at the end of last year.

A spokesman in the labor relations section of the BCHA said today the main issue is money. Junior residents now receive $8,000 a year.

At Jubilee Hospital, Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director, said he wants to assure patients and public that an interns' strike will not have any serious affect on patient care. That view was echoed by Jim Fair, executive director at Victoria General.

SPEC Wins Campaign Over Ganges Sewage

The provincial Pollution Control Board has upheld an appeal by environmentalists and turned down a plan by the Capital Regional Board to discharge sewage into Ganges Harbor on Salt Spring Island.

In a letter to the regional board Wednesday PCB chairman Ben Marr said the region had failed to show the proposed system would not cause pollution in the harbor.

The plan had been opposed by the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control in Vancouver after the regional board last year had been granted a permit.

The regional board had proposed a sewage collection system to serve the built-up portion of Ganges, a total of about 240 property owners, secondary treatment of the sewage and an outfall of about 1,000 feet to discharge the treated sewage into Ganges Harbor. Ganges currently has only individual septic tank systems.

SPEC had opposed the plan, arguing the harbor waters were inadequate to disperse the effluent without hazard and pointing out there were recreation beaches within 2,500 feet of the proposed outfall. It suggested a longer outfall might serve.

The pollution control board's ruling today said in part:

" . . . while the board is on record as recognizing discharge of secondary treated sewage into marine waters as a generally satisfactory method of municipal waste treatment, it is the opinion of the board that in this particular case of discharge into confined and shallow waters, (the regional board) has failed to show that the works proposed will not cause pollution in the Ganges Harbor."

George Heinekey, director for Salt Spring Island on the regional board, said today he was startled by the decision, anticipating there might have been more stringent conditions imposed but not that the proposal would get outright rejection.

Heinekey said one alternative would be to tell the province: "You turned it down. You put in the system."

'Suspicious' Fire

A fire in a locked locker room in the Stanley Apartments, 1350 Stanley, Wednesday night has prompted an investigation by Victoria fire department officials.

Deputy chief R. J. Coates said the fire, wich originated in a pile of boxes in a walkway of the locker room, was "highly suspicious" but would not say outright if it was arson.

Firemen, called to the scene at 10:10 p.m. when a heat detection device in the locker room triggered the alarm, had little trouble containing the blaze.

Coates said three lockers and contents were destroyed. He placed damage at roughly $3,500.

GREAT GLOVE MYSTERY of Dallas Road intrigues Mrs. Monty Porter, as she pauses by this handy litter bin. Can it be the victim of some ghastly crime? Some connection with the accumulating garbage problem and the CUPE strike-lockout? Was a dawn duellist "disarmed" in the very act of throwing down the gauntlet—with his hand still inside it? For the strong of heart, the answer is in the can. (Bill Halkett photo)

Fast Trial Requested

Kenneth George Katrensky, 27, of 308 Edward, pleaded not guilty in Victoria provincial court Wednesday afternoon to robbing the Bank of Nova Scotia at Douglas and Courtney of $1,484 only three hours before.

Katrensky, saying he wanted the quickest trial method, chose trial in provincial court.

Ostler remanded the case to Friday morning and told Katrensky he could seek advice from Legal Aid while held in jail.

City police said a young man approached teller Donna Lee Budd, 20, and held one hand in a jacket pocket as if to simulate a gun. He gave her a paper bag on which was written in black letters Empty Your Till.

After he received the money, the man slowly walked out of the bank. The teller told manageress Jeannine Robson there had been a holdup and pointed to a departing man.

While the manageress phoned the police, Miss Budd started out the main door after the man.

Recognizing a frequent customer of the bank, she asked him to help follow the man who was heading north along Douglas from Courtney.

Constables Larry Pickering and Robert Blackie arrived in a police car, Miss Budd pointed to the suspect and he was arrested without resistance.

The customer who joined the pursuit walked away without leaving his name.

$50,000 BAIL

Bail has been set at $50,000 for a Victoria man charged with murder in connection with the death of his wife March 1.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton set the bail in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday for Edward Robert Nicholet, 21, of 1345 Pandora.

Credit Unions Buck Rebate Shops

Victoria credit unions are making loans to keep people out of the hands of tax rebate shops, says Vincent Devries, manager of the Provincial Government Employees Credit Union.

"We have made a number of loans to people expecting rebates — and we will continue doing this," he said.

"I am concerned that so many people seem to be going to these tax rebate shops first, feeling they will be turned down by a credit union or a bank.

"They should try their credit union or bank first if they are expecting a rebate. They will save a great deal of money."

The local credit unions are responding to a plea from A. R. Glen, president of B.C. Central Credit Union, that funds be made available as loans against tax rebates.

Glen had said tax rebate shops were charging "outrageous" fees, as much as 50 per cent of the rebate.

Devries said the Provincial Government Employees Credit Union does not ask members to sign over the rebate to them, it simply makes a short-term loan and trusts the member to pay when the rebate comes.

The rate of loan approvals at credit unions is high, Devries said.

Provincial Government Credit Union approval rate is higher than most because most of the members are working. Unemployed members are the only marginal cases.

The Victoria credit union handles between 150 and 170 loan applications per month and rejects only one or two, Devries said.

Many of the loans being approved are against tax rebates and others are against retroactive pay.

Tax rebate cheques will be in the mail as soon as amendments to the Income Tax Act, approved by the House of Commons, are dealt with in the Senate. Final approval is expected momentarily.

B.C. Central Credit Union has urged the federal government to outlaw the practice of assigning tax rebates to other people, thereby putting the refund shops out of business.
